Rezoning proposed

Wilmington selectmen have prepared an article for the March 18 special town meeting that would rezone this lot at Silver Lake to R-60 zoning. They hope to block a proposed office building, which a Salem firm wants to build adjacent to the lake.

Selectmen seek to rezone parcel at Silver Lake

Action has been taken by the Town of Wilmington through its board of selectmen to rezone the controversial lot of land lying between Main Street and Silver Lake, formerly the site of the Walter Hale icehouses. The land has recently been proposed to be the site of an office building.

An article has been introduced into the warrant for the March 18 special town meeting asking that the land be rezoned to residential-R60, the largest residential size lot. That article is being advertised as a public notice this week in the Town Crier.

A number of Wilmington residents have protested to the Town Crier over the proposal to construct an office building on the site. Others have been protesting to town officials.

The action of the Wilmington Planning Board, in advertising the proposed zoning change, freezes all development of the property for the time being.

No proposals for building, no building plans, may now be filed with the Building Inspector until final action has been taken by the town meeting relative to the zoning of that lot of land.

Asked for comments, Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski said that it seems to be the selectmen's intent to try to preserve the present appearance of Silver Lake.

Tewksbury man found dead in Wilmington

A grim discovery was made by a fifteen year old Wilmington youth walking through the woods near the West Intermediate School last Sunday.

In a snowy field across from the school, at 1:45 p.m., the youth discovered the body of Robert Court, 23, with blood coming from a gunshot wound to his head, an apparent suicide, Wilmington Police Chief Bobby Stewart said.

The youth ran to his home to inform his mother who called the fire and police departments.

According to a medical examiner's estimate, Court had been dead two hours when his body was discovered by the Wilmington youth.

A 25 caliber automatic handgun was found near the body.

"An investigation is ongoing as to how the individual obtained the gun," Stewart said. Court had no permit for a handgun, so far as the police know, he said.

Court apparently walked to the field from his home, said Stewart.

Originally a resident of 598 North Street in Tewksbury, Court had been living at 294 Shawsheen Avenue, Wilmington prior to his death.

Court is survived by his parents Donald and Mary (Surette) Court, his sisters Dawn Sullivan and Sandra M. Court, his brothers James M. and Ronald J. Court and his grandmother Mrs. Margaret Surette.

Funeral arrangements are being made through the Tewksbury Funeral Home.

Cable tv study begins

With two years remaining in Wilmington's cable television franchise, a task force has begun a study of local cable service.

Presently, the franchise is held by the Greater Boston Cable Corp., located in Woburn. That firm, a subsidiary of the Providence (R.I.) Journal, picked up a 15-year franchise that was awarded by the selectmen in 1972. Because the franchise is an older one, Wilmington does not have some features included in newer systems, such as interactive cable, local origination or an expanded number of channels. One other problem in Wilmington has been the problem of installing cable in subdivisions with underground wiring.

The new franchise will ultimately be awarded by the selectmen, but the cable tv task force has been formed to study the field, to accept residents comments, and to provide advice to the selectmen. The selectmen have the option of renewing the franchise with the same firm, opening the franchise to bidding, or having the town start its own cable system. Because of the investment already in place, however, any choice other than renewing the franchise would be quite expensive. In the case of a renewal, then, it becomes a matter of negotiating with the cable firm for improvements in service.

The task force held its first meeting on Monday evening in the Town Hall. The meeting was chaired by Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, with twelve other persons in attendance: Richard Duggan, William Finer, Bernhard McMahon, Anthony Carnabucchi, Joseph Castronovo, John Creeth, Betty McMahon, Theresa Mercier, Patrick Hoffman, Dick Hassey, Al Sargent and Ed DeLap.

Members of the task force spent some of their time discussing complaints about the present system. Among the complaints were the lack of repair service on weekends, and the difficulty of reaching the company by telephone. Nobody was happy with the rate increase which took effect last month.

There was also discussion of what was available in other systems, and how Wilmington could negotiate for similar features, without greatly increasing costs.

Stapczynski said that the task force was of limited duration, but one member suggested that it become a permanent body, to monitor service and accept residents complaints.

Redevelopment authority seeks new role

The Wilmington Redevelopment Authority (WRA) is presently looking at the "mechanics" of placing an article to broaden the jurisdiction of the WRA on the annual town meeting warrant, according to WRA Chairman Jay Donovan.

At a recent WRA meeting, Donovan revealed that the article will either be in the form of an amendment to the 1966 article (which limited the jurisdiction of the WRA to the newly completed Jewell Industrial Park project) or a totally new article allowing the WRA to undertake other projects thought to be in the best interest of the town.

One such project under consideration is the "much needed" revitalization of Wilmington town center. Specifically, the new project would seek to improve and upgrade town center itself as well as the length of Routes 38 and 129 from Route 93 to Rocco's Restaurant.

According to WRA member Vaughn Surprenant, "our main interest will be to bring conformity in design and aesthetic values to the area, at the same time relieving the heavy traffic and congestion that now exists. If you can picture Lexington," he added, "that's how we perceive our town — one in which we can all take pride."

One of the most attractive aspects of this proposal, stated Surprenant, would be the granting of low interest loans to local businessmen in that area to help them in meeting certain WRA guidelines.

The overall purpose of the project, said Donovan, will be "to increase the tax base, create jobs, and improve the quality of life."

All of this could be done, he added, at no cost to the town since the WRA has the necessary funds in its own budget, to the tune of approximately $540,000. Members also expect to apply for several state and federal grants.

If the article is passed, improvements are not expected to get underway for at least another few years.

Representatives of the WRA have already met with Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, who is supportive of the article, and officials of the Executive Office of Communities and Development. State officials said the 1966 article was one of the "most restrictive" they've seen and suggested making the Redevelopment Authority's power "as broad as possible" in the future.

And, added Donovan, since the WRA has established "a lot of credibility" since 1966 and gained valuable experience, he hopes the town will see fit to do just that.

Future meetings are scheduled with Town Counsel Alan Altman, the board of selectmen, and the finance committee to help them understand what the WRA is proposing to do and to seek additional help and recommendations from these sources.

Nominations sought for 'Good Guy'

The Good Guy Committee is looking for a deserving person in Wilmington to honor as this year's Good Guy recipient. This event — the 17th annual — is designed to honor that person who goes beyond the normal call of duty to make the community a better place to live in.

If you know of anyone whom you feel should be deserving of this award, please help the committee by submitting your nomination, with the reasons why you feel this individual should be so rewarded, to the Good Guy Committee, P.O. Box 387, Wilmington.

The deadline is Friday, April 5. The award will be presented at a banquet on May 17 at the Sons of Italy Hall in Wilmington.

New elementary accreditation system

A program to evaluate and provide accreditation to New England elementary schools has recently been established by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges, Inc.

Many feel that such an "ambitious" program is one that is long overdue. With the establishment of such a program, New England becomes the last of six regional accrediting associations to make provisions for elementary schools to become accredited. During 1985, area elementary schools may enroll in the program and subsequently be evaluated within five years. The success of the new program will relate directly to the support it receives from superintendents, school committees, elementary administrators, and teachers.

Funding secured for traffic lights

New traffic control signals are soon to be installed at two locations, one in Wilmington and one in Tewksbury, State Representative James Miceli informed the Town Crier this week.

Miceli, who was instrumental in insuring that the necessary funding for the lights would be picked up by the State, said that the installations would be at the intersection of Federal Street and Middlesex Avenue (Route 62) in Wilmington and at the intersection of Andover Street (Route 133) and North Street in Tewksbury.

Miceli said that, at his urging,

Secretary of Administration and Finance Frank Keefe released the funds for these projects.

"I am extremely pleased to announce after the many hours of hard work put into this project, that my request for the installation of traffic lights at these two most dangerous intersections in my district is progressing in such an expeditious manner," he said.

Wilmington has one of the oldest Boy Scout troops

Copyright 1985
by Larz Neilson

The earliest memory the writer has of Boy Scouts in Wilmington can be dated to maybe 1919. Half a dozen Scouts, maybe more, were on Wilmington Common one fine summer day. A pair was signalling, with flags, wigwag, from one end of the common to the other. All were in uniforms that resembled the U.S. Army uniform of World War I.

It was an impressive sight for an eight-year-old boy, to watch those big boys having fun.

The chances are that Stanley Webber was one of those scouts. He is, today without doubt, the oldest person in Wilmington who has served in any Scout capacity. In the year 1919 Stanley Webber was awarded a medal for having sold more war bonds than any other scout.

Webber recalls Phillip Buzzell as a Scoutmaster. Attorney Buzzell was a student when he started a Boy Scout Troop back in 1914. The first Boy Scout meeting was in the former home of his parents on Main Street. That was the Jaques House so-called, built about 1750. Today the telephone building on Main Street stands on the approximate site. It was the boyhood home of Phillip Buzzell, son of Dr. Daniel.

Webber can recall a few persons who served as scoutmaster or assistant scoutmaster. Sometimes he is not certain as to who had what rank.

Eddie Lyons lived on what is now Carter Lane, and was a "motion picture machine operator" as it was expressed in those days. Milton Fiske lived on Church Street and was in the printing ink business. A third person was Walter Surrence who, for many years, clerked in the Buck Brothers store in North Wilmington.

Walter had a nickname of Vickie or Bickie. He took the Boy Scouts of Wilmington on a hike to Plymouth in 1920, on the 300th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims. It must have been quite a hike. Stanley Webber's word for it is that they "walked."

Other scouts sold the Liberty Bonds. Webber recalls that he and Edward Buck received medals from the Federal Reserve. Others who were participating were Frank Twomey, Walter Buck, George Webber and Ernest Fiske.

From then to about 1923 there is a gap, probably in the writer's knowledge, but possibly actual. The writer knows of no scout or scoutmaster for that period.

First Scout meeting

The first meeting for Boy Scouts, according to tradition, was in the Jaques House, also known as the Blanchard Home, in Wilmington Square. It occupied a part of the site now occupied by the telephone building. This painting was done by Inez White in 1858.

The Jaques House was the first post office, and in the late 19th Century was the home of Dr. and Mrs. Buzzell. Phillip Buzzell, scoutmaster is believed to have conducted his first meeting here.

Sometime about 1923 Hubert E. Cann, a man who had served in the Canadian Army in World War I moved into Wilmington. He bought a home on Grove Avenue, today numbered 142 or 144, or thereabouts. He immediately started work on having a Boy Scout Troop. The first thing he had to do was to get an organization to sponsor the scout troop.

That troop was Troop I, Wilmington. Both the Methodist Church and the Congregational Church were from time to time, the meeting place, and were possibly sponsors. The writer was one of the boys who joined.

Others who joined at that time were Walter Currier, still a resident of Wilmington, Alden S. Eames and Claude Thompson. Other boys who joined later included two who are still residents of Wilmington, Ted Norton and Albert Marlette.

Cann was a "driver." There was one meeting in the Methodist Church in which (it seemed) the entire meeting was devoted to "marching in place." A Memorial Day parade was coming and Cann wanted the Boy Scout Troop to look good. It is to be suspected that the Boy Scout Troop looked no better than any other troop in a parade, but that wasn't Cann's fault.

Cann finally recruited some men to be members of a sponsoring committee. Peter Neilson was one. He was on the Wilmington School Committee.

The West School (1876) was empty, no windows, no doors. It had been for several years the barracks for State police, mounted police, and was in 1923-4 deserted. Through Peter Neilson, Cann prevailed upon the School Committee to get that school for headquarters for scouting.

Cann worked at Lynn G.E. He put electric wiring in the school. Other men were prevailed upon to put in windows and doors, and from somewhere a railroad stove appeared. That building was Scout headquarters for about two years.

Among other things Cann resumed his drilling of the troop. He was raised in the British tradition. Having a straight line in a parade meant something to him.

Cann was, it must be said, a one man band. He had, for all purposes, no assistants. Boys would become Second Class Scouts. Some would reach First Class. But there was no organization to help the boys beyond that rank. There was no one to help Cann help the boys to Star Scout rank or higher.

Sometime about 1928 Cann had to move to Lynn. That, it seems, marked the end of Troop I in Wilmington.

Fred G. Oman was a young man who moved into Wilmington in 1930 or thereabouts. He became Scoutmaster of Troop I.

Unfortunately Fred died, in 1931 or 1932.

The Rev. Arthur Simmons of the Congregational Church had been helping Oman. Simmons owned a few lots of land in what is now the Town Forest, off Ballardvale Street and he dedicated that land to be for Boy Scout use. That land, about two acres, was named Camp Oman.

About 1934 a man named Justice Balser moved into Wilmington and built himself a home on Westdale Avenue. A Nova Scotia man, he had spent many years at sea. He was, in 1934, a carpenter. With him was his 16-year-old son, Foster.

Four boys visited Foster and told him the town needed a Boy Scout troop. He was asked to do something about it.

Foster was too young to be a scoutmaster, but he had the troop registered in the name of his father. He was the assistant scoutmaster.

Since then there has been a solid record. Troop I, Wilmington eventually became Troop 56, Greater Lowell Boy Scout Council, and there has been no gaps in registration.

Foster Balser was the Scoutmaster for about 12 years, all told. The troop got larger and larger. The Rev. Arthur Simmons provided encouragement, and a place to meet.

Foster, like other young men, went into the Army for World War II. When he returned home it was to take over leadership of the troop.

Foster recalls, with pleasure, one of the highlights of leading that Boy Scout troop.

Lord Robert Baden-Powell, and Lady Baden-Powell were visiting Boston and were being received in Symphony Hall, back in the second half of the 1930 decade. The Rev. Mr.

Simmons invited Foster to go to Symphony Hall with him to meet Baden-Powell.

Baden-Powell was the man who first started the Boy Scout movement. He was inspired by incidents in the Boer War, in South Africa, and started a troop of Boy Scouts in Britain.

And, thanks to the Rev. Mr. Simmons, Foster Balser says, he had an opportunity to meet, in person, Baden-Powell.

When Foster Balser returned to Wilmington after World War II, Troop I, like everything else in Wilmington, was growing.

The troop got to number 90 scouts. It was still one troop with one scoutmaster. But national headquarters did not like such an arrangement.

So the troop was divided into two parts, Troop I and Troop II. The two troops would meet at the same time and place and Foster Balser would conduct the meetings. But he had to have help with 90 boys in one meeting.

He got that help. There were five assistant scoutmasters, and two junior assistant scoutmasters. There were eight patrol leaders and eight assistant patrol leaders.

Foster reports he would spend five minutes with one group and then five minutes with another while the assistants did the work. He jokes that he was an "arm chair scoutmaster."

Wilmington Town Hall, across the street from the church was mostly empty at about that time. The Boy Scouts got permission to meet there. For several years that was Boy Scout headquarters.

Headquarters also moved into the basement of the old High School, now the Swain School. At that time there was an average of about 75 boys at each meeting.

Eventually, the troop became Troop 56 of the Greater Lowell Council.

It should be said that while Foster was in the Army, Herbert Higginbotham of Chestnut Street was the scoutmaster of Troop I.

Pack 56 should also be mentioned. It was an adjunct of Troop 56, in post war years, and was possibly the biggest Cub Scout pack in the United States — 120 Cub Scouts were in that pack at one time. Evelyn Kaminski of Fairmeadow Road was one of those who were caring for that pack and the lady had her hands full.

When her husband Walter became Scoutmaster of Troop 58 at St. Dorothy's Church, Evelyn transferred her Scout work to that church. She has had an active career in Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and Campfire Girls, and later became the director of Camp Forty Acres. She resigned as president just eleven days ago.

The Kaminskis also had the distinction of being the parents of three Eagle Scouts. All of their sons, James, Michael and John, received Scouting's highest rank.

Foster Balser was going on to bigger things. He became a Neighborhood Commissioner under the Greater Lowell Boy Scout Council. Then he became a District Commissioner. He ended up being the Executive Vice President of the Greater Lowell Boy Scout Council.

And honors came to Foster. He was awarded the Silver Beaver, an award given to adults who forward the Scouting movement. He was the first person in Wilmington to win such an award.

No one can talk of what Foster Balser has done for scouting without talking of Camp Forty Acres.

Foster heard of a man who lived in Tewksbury and owned 40 acres of oak forest in North Wilmington in an area adjacent to the town of Andover. The man wanted to give that property away.

Foster went to Phillip Buzzell, then Town Counsel of Wilmington. Phillip handled the legal work and that 40 acres of land was transferred to Wilmington Youth Camps, Inc. It provides camping ground for Boy Scouts and for other organizations too. Lately it has been in the capable hands Evelyn Kaminski.

At the time that a town forest was proposed for Wilmington, in North Wilmington, the Camp Forty Acres area was enclosed in the preliminary proposals. Those fortunate persons who know Evelyn Kaminski will never forget the incident.

If ever a lady had fire in her eyes, it was Mrs. Kaminski when that proposal was made. She and others went to work, and made certain that "Camp Forty Acres" would remain under its own title, and independent of any town forest.

And so it is today, the work of Foster Balser and, one can say Evelyn Kaminski.

Scouts celebrate 75th anniversary

The 75th Anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America - 1910 to 1985 is to be celebrated Saturday at Aleppo Temple in Wilmington. The Boy Scouts of the Greater Lowell Council will have an all day celebration. Aleppo Temple is at the end of Fordham Road, by the North Reading line.

Approximately 2000 Boy Scouts and Scouters are expected to be present during the day. There will be 60 units of Boy Scouts and about 1200 Boy Scouts present. The theme of the day is Pride in the Past, and Footsteps to the Future.

Nicholas A. Vacca, Scout Executive of Greater Lowell, will be in charge. A professional in Scouting, he has served 21 years, and has been in the Lowell area since May 1984. He came from Virginia Beach, Va. Vacca will be meeting at about 9 a.m. with the early comers for coffee, at the Shriners Auditorium at the end of Fordham Road, and will be present all day.

The Supreme Potentate of Aleppo Temple, Paul F. Miller of Arlington and Rep. James Miceli are to open the program at 10 a.m. The opening ceremony is expected to take 15 minutes.

From then on it will be a full day of events.

The Wilmington Company of Minutemen is to appear in uniform, for an exhibition of Colonial Drill at 10:15 a.m.

A Scottish Dance team will appear at 11 a.m. in a program that is to last about 45 minutes. At noon a rock 'n roll band will take over for a concert.

At 2 p.m. a self defense program is to take place, hosted by Fred Vallari.

The Wilmington Skirts and Flirts will strut, starting at 3 p.m. The square dancing will have as a caller Joe Portierance.

A fantastic closing ceremony is planned, to be at about 4:30 p.m. In charge of the cake will be Eagle Scout Scott Sughrue, of Belvoir Road, Tewksbury.

Scott has been in charge of making the cake. It is reported to weigh 300 pounds, and to be decorated with Scouting motifs. It is to be mounted on two turn tables, one clockwise and the other counter clockwise.

Such an action might make a cake fall apart, but Sughrue is confident that will not happen. The cake is to be cut up, at 4:30 p.m. and distributed to those present. It should be a fitting finish, for a celebration by 2000 Scouts and friends.

Dudley Buck was active with Scouts

Dudley Buck was the 1950's genius of Wilmington, both in and out of Boy Scouts. He appeared in Wilmington about 1952, to attend the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He had been raised on a "stump ranch" in the Puget Sound area of Washington - a stump ranch being what the loggers leave, after all the trees are cut.

Dudley bought a home on Birchwood Road, while a student at MIT. He was both an enchanting person, and a leader. He soon was an assistant scoutmaster of Troop 56.

Tom MacFeeley, who today is the scoutmaster of Troop 136, fondly remembers the stories that Dudley Buck would tell around the campfire.

Every day he would be at MIT, working on his thesis, having to do with the reactions of materials in an absolute frozen state, at absolute zero, which is somewhere about 360 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

Evenings and weekends - well he was a Boy Scout leader. He was a church worker. Shortly after the people of Wilmington learned of him, he was a member of the School Committee.

Dudley could sit at a campfire, at Camp Forty Acres and spin off one yarn after another, to a fascinated audience. Give him an item, about which to talk, and talk he did. He would hold his audience spellbound.

This was about the time that scientists were studying silicon chips, trying to make computers.

Dudley had another method. Work with wires at absolute zero, and use that as a basis for a computer. He did, and it worked.

There came a day when Life Magazine devoted one whole page to a picture of the hand of Dr. Dudley Buck of Wilmington, Mass. In that hand was the little microscopic device he had invented, to be the basis of a computer.

Dudley Buck

Dudley Buck shown at Camp Forty Acres in 1953 in one of the lean-to shelters for overnight camping. He is having a "rough-house" with scouts. The boy on whose head his hand appears is Tom MacFeeley now Scoutmaster of Troop 136. To the right are Scouts Fred McAndrew and George Gladding.

That device, said Life, would do away with rows and rows and the banks and banks of computers at MIT. And, at least theoretically, Life was right.

But - the silicon chip now used in computers, was invented at about the same time. It was the silicon chip which won out. It did not require a temperature of absolute zero.

One day in May 1959 Dudley went into MIT to work on a project. He was shivering, when he left home. A few days later he took to bed, and on May 21, 1959 he died, at age 32.

A bereaved School Committee caused a relief bust to be made of Dr. Dudley Buck. It is on a wall in the lobby of Wilmington High School.

Few people remember him, but he was a remarkable man.

Scouts 75th

Wilmington Boy Scouts celebrated the 75th anniversary of Scouting at a dinner Monday night at the Wilmington K of C Hall. Cutting the cake, at left, is Andy Blackburn, a Webelos in Pack 56. Former Scoutmaster Foster Balser, center, later cut a second cake.

Scoutmasters Tom MacFeeley of Troop 136 and Bob Rachdorf of Troop 56 were at the Monday night dinner celebrating Scouting's 75th anniversary.

Impulse Dance Co. performs at W.H.S.

Jazz dance Students at Wilmington High School recently had an opportunity to see professional jazz dancing, when the Impulse Dance Company performed at the school.

Wilmington senior topics

Thanks, Rep. Miceli

The Wilmington Council on Aging (WCOA) is grateful to Representative Jim Miceli for all the help he has given to the attempt to reach the goal of opening the doors of the Buzzell Senior Center by June 30. Rep. Miceli made all the arrangements with the Carpenters' Unions Local 41 of Woburn and Local 595 of Salem to shingle the roof of the school. He is now working with the same carpenters' unions for additional free labor. Last Thursday Rep. Miceli volunteered precious time out of his busy day speaking on the seniors' behalf at the business luncheon, sponsored by the WCOA at the present Senior Center.

Less than hoped for

The COA is a little disappointed in the lack of interest from the business community toward the Buzzell Senior Center renovation project, but is very grateful to the business people who did attend the luncheon and learned more about the project. Seniors are grateful to those business people who apologized for not being able to attend, but sent a donation.

Sweetheart dinner

Through the generosity of the management of Sweetheart Plastics Company, the Annual Senior Citizen Sweetheart Dinner will be held in the company restaurant Sunday afternoon, February 10 beginning at 2 p.m. (Jack Cushing requests that seniors not arrive at Sweetheart too early as they cannot be seated until everything is ready.)

One hundred and sixty seniors are already signed up and a waiting list has been started. Therefore seniors are asked to notify the Center (657-7595; 658-2258 or Saturday - Sunday, 658-9205) if they find they have signed up and cannot attend. This will allow senior presently on the waiting list to attend.

Therapeutic social

The COA therapeutic social for February will be held Thursday, February 14 at the Logbridge Inn. The meal will be chicken pie. Music for dancing will be provided. Buses will leave the Senior Center promptly at 5:30. It is requested that those attending be at the Center by 5:15 p.m. to check in before boarding the bus.

All disabled seniors will ride on the first bus. This is for their benefit so that they may be seated first at the restaurant. Buses will leave for home at 9:15 p.m. A $1.00 non-refundable deposit will be required.

Monitor needed

Principal Paul Fleming of Wilmington High School is in need of a female senior citizen to work as a monitor at the high school. For more information call Mrs. Gearty at the high school.

Tax form assistance

Starting Wednesday, February 6, Mr. Hdad Herrick will be at the Center from 1 to 4 p.m. to assist seniors in preparing their federal and state income tax forms. It is necessary to make an appointment by calling the center. The day of the appointment seniors must have with them their package from the federal and state; all 1099 interest forms; and if they worked in 1984, their W-2 form. This year those who are single and have a gross income of over $25,000 (couple $32,000) part of their Social Security will be taxed. Therefore, this income must be included when filing tax forms.

Thursday: Oven baked chicken, buttered carrots, whipped potato, rolls and butter, Valentine cake and milk.

Friday: Baked fish au gratin, whipped potato, crisp garden salad, bread and butter, ice cream and milk.

On Thursday, January 24, the Performing and Fine Arts Department also sponsored a dance performance by the well known Impulse Dance Company for all W.H.S. students and other interested high school students. The program was coordinated by dance-art instructor, Joanne Canzaniello. The professional jazz dance company illustrated many styles of jazz dance that have evolved through the years, including improvisations, Gospel style, the Blues, social dancing of the 1940's and 60's and contemporary dance in a style popularized by the television program, "Fame." Students were also able to question the dancers about their careers in training.

Such a demonstration was particularly valuable for W.H.S. dance students, but also interested and excited many other students for whom this was a first experience with a live dance performance.

Mrs. Leonard also said that to continue bringing lively performances into the schools, W.H.S. chorus, jazz band and dance company members will become artists in residence on February 12 and 13, touring the school system. This will culminate in a high school performance on February 14.

An exhibition of police memorabilia was displayed in the window of Wilmington Center Pharmacy, courtesy of Chief Harry Ainsworth.

Coach Dick Ring, while skating in the Eastern Seaboard races, tripped on the 39th lap of the outdoor five mile race.

There were nearly 50 articles on the warrant for the upcoming annual town meeting.

There was a sign war being waged and Selectman Frank Hagerty, reportedly always on the side or progress was actively involved along with other members of the board.

Wilmington Rotarians had more than 20 perfect attendance meetings under their belts.

Wedding gowns from the past hundred years were featured in a fashion show presented last spring by the Wilmington Women's Club. All of the wedding gowns were provided by members of the club. Some were ones which had been worn by their mothers, others were their own. The show included both antique and modern gowns.

Marriage — a time-honored ritual

by Arlene Surprenant
Young couples getting married today are participating in a time honored ritual. The same traditions they observe today had their origins in other cultures, countries, and centuries.

For instance, the "something blue" in the saying "something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue" dates back to the blue ribbon worn by Israelite brides. This ribbon was a symbol of purity, fidelity, and love.

Throwing rice
The custom of throwing rice and confetti at the newlywed couple had its origin in Greek peasant weddings when, after the religious ceremony, the couple would be pelted with sweets and nuts as they walked back down the aisle. In some parts of Greece, the procession to the groom's house was showered with rice, cottonseed, small coins, and myrtle leaves.

The ring
Prometheus is said to be the first maker of a ring. Adam supposedly advised Cain to use one when marrying his wife.

The Romans used iron rings and the custom caught on in Greece. Wedding rings at that time served as both a down payment (when a couple became engaged) and a sign that a contract had been made and the future bride was no longer "for sale."

Britons also used the ring in their ceremonies dating back, at least, to the 14th Century and the time of Chaucer. These rings were usually made of copper, brass, steel, silver or leather.

The gimmel or double ring was popular in 16th and 17th Century Europe. It consisted of two or more hoops. When engaged, the ring was divided and worn by the man and woman. At the actual wedding ceremony, the double ring would be joined together and used as a wedding ring.

Today, the double wedding ring is said to be enjoying tremendous popularity, with as many as 90 percent of the grooms wearing one.

The wedding cake
The wedding cake is a symbol of the earth's plenty and the bride's future fertility.

It derived from the Roman cake in the Patrician wedding ceremony. In this ceremony, a simple wheat cake was baked and small pieces were eaten by the bride and groom. The rest was broken over the bride's head and the guests ate the crumbs. This reportedly blessed the couple with a rich life and many children.

In Britain during the Tudor period, the wedding cake became a wedding bun made with spices and currants. Guests as well as the couple shared the many buns that were piled up to form a centerpiece at the wedding feast.

Icing was added to the cake by the French until the wedding cake became an elaborate showpiece, especially in the late 1800's and Victorian England. Finally, both a Bride's Cake and Groom's Cake became fashionable.

Bridal veil and Orange blossoms

The origin of the bridal veil is cloudy. Some think it harks back to the bridal canopy of the Jewish people or the veil the bride wore in the ancient Roman ceremony.

It is commonly held, however, that many countries sought to hide the bride from the "evil ones" by enveloping her in a long veil.

One late introduction into England and America was the orange blossom.

It is generally accepted that the Moors first brought the orange tree into Spain. The custom of weaving a circlet of orange blossoms into the bride's hair was passed from Spain to France and England and ended in an orange blossom crown in America.

The orange blossom is said to be symbolic of virginity and fertility, with the white blossoms signifying innocence and purity. An old superstition says these blossoms must be burned within a month of the wedding or back luck will follow.

Bride's bouquet

The bridal bouquet derived from the Romans. It was the Romans' custom to light the first fire in the couple's new home with a torch which was then tossed out and caught by a member of the wedding party.

In the 14th Century, the French made the custom safer by substituting flowers for the torch.

The bridal party

In early times the groom, with the help of his male friends, used to acquire his wife by capturing her. To prevent this the future bride had her female friends protect and surround her.

Originally, these "bride's maids" dressed exactly like the bride in order to confuse the groom. To this day, the bridesmaids dress alike, though usually in gowns different from the bride's.

The friends who helped the bride and groom were usually awarded ribbons or other tokens which led to the custom of giving gifts to the wedding party.

The wedding gown
Most wedding gowns today are white, symbolizing virginity. This wasn't always the case.

Until about 200 years ago, there was no such thing as a wedding gown. The bride usually wore a newly acquired, colorful "best" dress.

Women from Iceland

sometimes wore black velvet embroidered in silver and gold. Once in a while purple was worn by the bride in mourning for a relative. Green, however, was never worn as it was closely associated with jealousy and romps in the grass.

Anne of Brittany was the first bride in recent history recorded wearing white at her wedding in 1498.

In earlier times the groom, in an attempt to take center stage, would dress up his conventional suit with such accessories as a flowered waistcoat, lace-edged handkerchief, feathered hat, white gloves, and a cane. Many men chose to wear elegant uniforms with a fur cape, jeweled chain, and a sword. And Oriental grooms wore ornate costumes with a glittering headdress.

Today, a tuxedo or morning coat and top hat is the traditional groom's garb.

How to have your wedding published

Wedding photos and stories are run in the Town Crier as a public service. Because they are treated as news, there is no charge for publication. The Town Crier has a questionnaire that allows a staff writer to create a well written story of the wedding. The completed questionnaire should be submitted along with a photo.

Likewise, engagements are published free of charge. Photos may accompany the announcement.

The size of the photo does not usually matter unless it is very small or large. Black and white photos are preferred, but color can be accommodated. If a professional photographer took the photo (either the engagement or the wedding) he should be happy to provide you with a good black and white print.

Photos submitted can be returned. It is best to come to the Town Crier office shortly after the photo appears in print to reclaim your photo.

Surviving the first year of marriage

Suddenly the fanfare is over. Bridal showers, shopping trips and honeymoon travel are mementos in a scrapbook.

A couple hundred guests have been wined, dined and entertained. The flowers and the music were perfect. Wedding gifts overflow the closets of your tiny apartment.

A fantasyland honeymoon has flown swiftly by and now you are home. You can relax. Put your feet up. There's nothing left but happily ever after.

Happy? Who's happy? Dinner and T.V. have become the week night staple. Weekend dates have given way to apartment cleaning and trips to the laundromat, usually alone.

That handsome lover who sat next to you at the head table listening to your every word has become a sullen stranger who communicates in grunts from behind an open newspaper.

Usually, he says something like "Why has my new white shirt turned purple?!"

What you're experiencing is "honeymoon let down." Don't be too quick to blame the guy behind the newspaper. He's feeling it too.

What you're both facing is probably the most difficult task of your marriage getting through that first year. The challenge is to turn a relationship focused upon the idealism of a courtship into the solid reality of two people who care enough about each other to share all parts of their personalities... bad habits as well as good.

You didn't know he was so lazy. He didn't realize you'd be spending every Saturday morning at the hairdresser's. You'd think he could at least pick up his dirty socks. He hates finding blonde curly hairs in his safety razor.

You want to go out with friends on Friday night. He's had too much socializing at work and wants to stay in and watch the basketball game.

Gradually, subtly, your best friend is turning into your worst enemy. Things tend to change once you settle down to married life.

But it doesn't have to be this bad.

The most obvious change is that you no longer have to go out to be together. Instead of going to restaurants and movies you stay at home cooking and watching T.V. If either of you is the type who misses the roar of the crowd, why not set aside a minimum of two nights a month for an outside activity together. One night you choose, one night he chooses. Just make sure whatever it is takes you beyond the walls of your apartment. And no grumbling if, on his night, you find yourself watching the Bruins at Boston Garden.

One trap to avoid is trying to be all things to each other, kind of like two against the world. Togetherness is fine in manageable doses, but don't feel threatened if your mate expresses a need to do some things without you. And don't feel you need to spend all your free time with your husband.

The real key to a successful marriage is being able to talk about your feelings in a way that isn't threatening. If your spouse can realize it is not because you are bored with your marriage that you feel a need to take a night class in aerobics then you have a head start on making your marriage work.

A key rule should be: if it bothers you, talk about it... tactfully. Resentment and bitterness may result if you try to deny your feelings, or simply wait, hoping your spouse will change.

Another rule is: he who listens, learns. Don't automatically turn a deaf ear to what sounds like nagging. Sometimes a lot of resentment can be avoided by changing one simple little thing.

Reframing differences is a technique that often works. Instead of using differences to find fault with the other person, look upon them as an outside force for which neither person can be blamed.

Successful couples learn to compromise, even making direct trade-offs. One wife attends the most important dinner parties of her husband's law firm. It's not her favorite thing to do, but each time she goes, he pays her back by attending a function for which she would like an escort.

Getting along with the opposite sex has never been easy, but for those who can master the game the rewards are many.

Remember, the first year is only fifty-two weeks long. After that, you can handle anything.

"I never knew what happiness was until I was married — then it was too late."

What makes a successful marriage?

The following is a sampling of answers to the question: "What, in your opinion, makes a marriage successful?"

Peter Pellegrini, Harold Ave., Wilmington (married): To be able to give in a little bit — understand each other and regard each other as an individual.

Linda Gaffey, Shawsheen Ave., Wilmington (married): Communication; having your own space and personal time, having similar interests.

Millie Gillis, Randolph Road,

Wilmington (married): Fifty-fifty, the give and the take. You must know a person well before you make the decision to marry.

Carol Marquis, Shawsheen Ave., Wilmington (married): Selflessness. You have to let go of what you want and put the partner first.

John O'Neil, Spring Grove Rd., Andover, (single): The prospective married couple should be in agreement on basics like child-rearing, finance, religion, and politics. Obviously, it's these four things that may create friction in a marriage.

Wilhelmina Derrance, Reed St., Wilmington (single): Trust, love, companionship, faith — those are the most important things.

Kathy Wells, Lake St., Wilmington (married): Communication, sensitivity, a good physical relationship, sharing. You must realize it's not always going to be smooth. You kind of have to "roll with the punches."

Dan Cosman, Lawrence Street, Wilmington, (married): Trust, communication, feelings, and understanding all lead into love.

Paula Samatis, Brand Ave.,

Wilmington (separated): You have to have truth and honesty factors, plus communication.

Linda Robinson, Brattle Street, Wilmington (married): You have to put the other first and realize marriage is no easy road — never give up.

Michael Medeiros, Lloyd Road, Wilmington (single): Two people agreeing and sharing everything. Also doing things together, sharing thoughts, love.

Eleanor Demos, Hopkins Street, Wilmington (married): You need a strong bond between two people. Trust, understanding, and communication are very important. Though you may not always agree with the other's views, you should respect them.

Bob DiPalma, Harold Avenue, Wilmington (married): My philosophy is you have to overlook a lot. You also have to do a lot of listening, and if you want the marriage to be successful, not much talking.

Debbie Cabral, Chandler Street, Tewksbury (married): Communicating and sharing hopes, dreams, the good and the bad.

Joanne Brunelle, Benson Street, Wilmington (single):

Keeping the lines of communication open. Be understanding and have unity and togetherness.

Cheryl Soderquist, Hobson Avenue, Wilmington (married): Communication and respect for one another and their feelings.

Paul Theodos, Glen Road, Wilmington (married): Respect and trust. Kids, too, because they help hold a marriage together.

Judy Revelas, Grace Drive, Wilmington (married): A shared philosophy, mutual support, and a lot of flexibility.

A marriage that works

by Arlene Surprenant

It's not often you meet a couple who makes marriage look easy. It's not often you meet two people who, after 20 years of togetherness, four children, and the usual amount of adjustments, have managed to hone down the edges and reach a point of almost complete accord, all the while remaining true to their childhood values.

Such a pair are Arthur and Mary Venditti of Chestnut Street, Wilmington.

Both, in their friendly, gracious manner, consented to a recent interview to talk about their family and 20 year marriage.

Their living room, where the interview took place, is done in browns and earth tones and reflects the warmth and simplicity of their lifestyle. But what captures your immediate attention are the splashes of color and vivid movement that fill the surrounding walls. For these are Arthur's livelihood — his oil paintings that reveal the true essence of the man.

Arthur, a professional artist and dabbler in poetry and Mary, a part time hairdresser and full time homemaker, are what many might call old fashioned. They take a traditionalist approach to many things and are especially aware of the part their ancestry plays in their present lives and their children's future.

Both express pride in their Italian heritage. Arthur's grandparents came from Sicily 75 years ago. Mary tells the story of Arthur's grandmother bringing all her belongings over in a sturdy, cedar-lined trunk. The same trunk which they have lovingly refurbished now graces the Venditti's home.

His grandparents settled in Boston's former West End where there were maybe 50 nationalities. And in his early years there, Arthur learned to respect all people regardless of color, creed, or background.

Mary's grandfather was an Italian barber from whom she might have derived her interest in hairstyling.

Both Arthur and Mary feel their marriage strongly emulates that of their parents.

Arthur's parents would have been married 45 years had his father lived. His mother, Mary, at 75, is an accomplished poetess who obtained her driver's license at age 70, and according to her enthusiastic daughter-in-law, is "a story teller, pun writer, witty, and one of my most unforgettable characters."

Mary's parents, Mary and Sam Focociello, reside in Woburn and have spent 50 special years together as man and wife.

In looking back at the early days of their own marriage, the Vendittis laugh, recalling the circumstances of their first meeting.

It took place at Hanscomb Air Force Base where Arthur was a member of the Air Force security police on duty at the front gate. Mary was trying to gain entrance to visit someone else. In no time at all they were engaged, then married on a beautiful May day in 1964 at a ceremony complete with six bridesmaids in shades of pink and ushers in traditional grey morning coats.

After a honeymoon in Canada (and a struggle deciphering the street signs with two years of high school French under their belts), they settled down in an apartment off base.

Arthur was doing rotating shifts in the Air Force for the next two years. And since money was short and time together was at a premium, they naturally experienced some rough times in the beginning.

They also learned one of their first lessons: "once you stop letting outside elements interfere with your marriage, you're fine."

As is typical of many brides, Mary's first dinner was anything but perfect. Mary recalls preparing a tuna noodle casserole which didn't appeal to her husband. So he fed it to their cat, who promptly sought the nearest tree and remained there for five days before being rescued.

Shortly after, they moved to Wilmington and saw a lot of changes. "75 percent not for the best," says Mary with a shake of her head.

Children play a major part in the Venditti's life and are their biggest joy.

Christopher, at 18, is the oldest and studies commercial art at Middlesex Community College. Seventeen year old Laura is a junior at Shawsheen Tech planning for a career in the health field, while Jennifer, at 11, is "quite a young lady" who attends sixth grade at Shawsheen Elementary School. And Amy, an engaging nine year old at the same school, already knows she wants to go to Harvard to be a lawyer.

"We enjoyed every one of them," stresses Mary in speaking of her well adjusted, close knit brood.

She feels she "has always been there" for her children which she thinks is important because being a parent today "demands more time and effort than you realize." And, she adds, the most important thing to remember in raising a family is "to keep your sense of humor at all times" and be consistent.

Arthur adds a philosophical note. Children need deep roots, he points out, and need parents home to provide those roots. "When there are no roots, that's when the tree falls."

Though their interests diverge occasionally, most of the time you'll find the Vendittis pursuing hobbies together.

"We wouldn't have gotten married if we didn't want to be together," explains Arthur.

Mary echoes his sentiments. "I love being with him. We love the same things," she says, then adds thoughtfully, "he's my best friend."

She also feels strongly that "if you need your own space, you shouldn't get married."

Their togetherness extends to joint membership in the Wilmington Sons of Italy and the Tewksbury Art Guild, of which Arthur is president and Mary vice-president.

By far, their favorite pastime is traveling, either to the mountains, Canada, or their special retreat, the beaches of Cape Cod. The ocean appeals to them both for its peace and serenity ("It was so quiet you wanted to whisper," says Mary of one vacation there). The ocean also provides the inspiration for much of Arthur's work.

The children are usually included in their travel plans as they feel travel is one of the "best educational experiences." And, adds Mary, "children see things adults don't, so you tend to see through their eyes."

Their greatest hope for the future is the chance to travel to Europe and especially afford Arthur an opportunity to paint in France.

As a professional artist, Arthur turns out an ambitious amount of oil paintings in his basement studio. Seascapes, still lifes, snow scenes, and detailed character studies — many recaptured from his astonishing memory — fill his home and are sold on a regular basis to an admiring public.

Arthur also tries his hand at poetry ("Did you know you married a true Renaissance man?" her mother-in-law once asked Mary).

Poetry, like painting, can really "engulf" you, says Arthur. He writes on whatever he feels at the time, sometimes turning out three or four poems a day and even publishing some.

Arthur's also been known to put together "wonderful" pizzas and take over complete control of the barbeque grill in the summertime.

Mary enjoys all kinds of people, a prime requisite for the hairdresser's job she took just last year in a beauty shop in Lexington. Before that, she spent much of her time taking care of the children ("my main talent is being a good mother") and teaching CCD at St. Thomas' Church.

On the subject of marriage both Arthur and Mary, after a tenuous pause, warm up to the subject.

Mary is right away reminded of Mother Theresa's advice to love in your own home and this love will grow to include others. She adds that "you're only going to get out of marriage what you put in" and love should be a top priority.

Respect is another priority, from Arthur's point of view. It's absolutely necessary, he says, to respect your partner's feelings and his or her unique qualities and talents.

Though it may look easy, marriage only grows stronger through effort. You need to work at a marriage, says Arthur.

And both are adamant that marriage is meant to last forever. With good humor, honesty, a touch of romance (Arthur's a "true romantic" who's not afraid of showing his feelings and bringing home an occasional bouquet of flowers, says his wife), and plenty of compromise, two people can learn to bend instead of break.

Good advice, and certainly in this case, advice which has stood the test of time in the Venditti's own marriage.

Cheryl Keene weds Daniel Wandell, Jr.

Cheryl Ann Keene, of 3 Prospect Ave., Chelsea, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Keene of Burning Bush Drive, Boxford, became the bride of Daniel C. Wandell, Jr. of Shawshen Avenue, Wilmington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Wandell Sr. on September 22.

The ecumenical, double ring ceremony was performed at 2 p.m., before the altar of St. Mary's Church, Beverly, by Father Maurice Connolly of St. Mary's and the Rev. Herman Silvius III of Trinity Church, Topsfield.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a gown of white chiffon trimmed with Venice and chantilly lace, featuring a slit neckline, beaded bodice, Edwardian sleeves, and an applied skirt which flowed into a cathedral length, scalloped train. Her elbow length veil of was of same lace and she carried a bouquet of gardenias, white roses, white miniature carnations and greens. She also wore a gold locket, a gift from the groom.

Susan Krupski of Lynn, a childhood friend of the bride served as maid of honor, while the bride's attendants included Heidi McLellan, and Stacy Mills, also a close friends of the bride; Pamela McDonough of Wilmington, sister of the groom, Laurel Matthews, cousin of the bride, Pamela Jalbert, also a cousin.

The attendants wore gowns of daphne rose with that of the maid of honor in a lighter color. Silk ribbons adorned their waistlines. They carried bouquets of assorted flowers tied with silk ribbons matching their gowns.

John Falletti of Charleston, close friend of the groom served as best man while ushering duties were in charge of Greg MacDonald, Kevin Dicey, Michael Stoakes and Thomas Filio, also friends of the groom, Carl and Keith Keene, brothers of the bride and Michael Wandell, the groom's brother.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at Victor Rocci Post, Beverly.

The new Mrs. Wandell is a 1981 graduate of Masconomet Regional High School, Boxford and is currently attending Suffolk University in Boston where she is a social work major.

Her husband, a 1981 graduate of Wilmington High School is currently attending Suffolk University as a management major.

The bride is currently employed as procedures clerk in Adoption Department of Middlesex Probate Court, Cambridge and the groom is a supervisor in Corporation Division of Secretary of State's office, Boston.

Following a honeymoon in Florida (Winterhaven, Orlando, Disney and Tampa) the couple is now living in Melrose.

Four top bachelors ready to bite the dust

by Elaine DePasquale
Cupid must be getting into politics.

He's taken aim with his bow and arrow and speared the hearts of four of Wilmington's most eligible bachelors this year. All four are members of the local political establishment.

Heading the list is Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski. Buzz, who came to Wilmington as assistant town manager in 1978, has held the town's top administrative job since 1981. On November 3, he will marry Sandy Duci of Somerville who works in Boston as a government consultant.

The pair met three years ago "through work," says Buzz.

A traditional Greek wedding will take place at the Greek church in Somerville.

Buzz, who originally hails from Michigan, but says he has chosen New England as his home, can often be seen jogging along Wilmington roadways. Running is one of his favorite sports.

The first local politician to march down the aisle this year will be James Stewart, 25 year old chairman of the Wilmington Board of Selectmen.

On June 22, he will wed Tewksbury's Mary Martin, after a whirlwind courtship. The two have known each other less than a year, after having met on a blind date.

Mary, 24, is an office manager for Price Waterhouse, an accounting firm in Boston. Her fiancée, when not administering to town business, is a sales representative for Corning Glass Works and works out of their Littleton office.

A traditional wedding will take place at St. William's Church in Tewksbury followed by a reception at the Sons of Italy Hall in Wilmington.

It is a first marriage for both.

"First and last," says Stewart.

No definite date has yet been set for the upcoming marriage of Chairman Jay Donovan, 35, to Susan MacDonald, also 35, of Wilmington. Jay says the pair hope to hold their wedding celebration at Castle Hill in Ipswich but have "been put on hold a couple of times."

"We're shooting for July or August," he said, "and looking at some other places, too."

Jay met Susan, an elementary school teacher in Saugus, "on the campaign trail," while both were campaigning for former U.S. Representative Jim Shannon a few years back.

"This seemed like a good year to do it," he joked about his forthcoming marriage. "It's an off-year politically."

Donovan is self-employed as a planning and development consultant. He works on federal and state grant applications at his Andover office, J.J. Donovan & Associates.

As Redevelopment Authority Chairman he and other members of his board meet monthly to further the industrial development of Jewell Park. The Authority owned the land there until recently when it sold its last parcel to an industrial developer.

"This was a blighted area in 1966," Donovan said. Now it is providing tax income to the town.

Plans are in the making, he said, to approach the town meeting for another site to develop, he said.

August 17 is the wedding date chosen by School Committee Member Bob Peterson and his bride-to-be Carla Andersen of Wilmington.

Carla, who lives on Oakdale Road, is a radiologic technician at Lawrence Memorial Hospital in Medford. Her parents are Doug and Brenda Andersen.

Bob, formerly a fifth grade teacher at the Shawshen Elementary School, is now in his second year at New England Law School in Boston. He also works part time at the law offices of Attorney Donald Green on Lewis Wharf in Boston.

The couple have been going together for three years, Bob said.

Until recently, their plans were to be married at St. Thomas Church by Father Vic LaVoie. Major renovations to be undertaken at the church during the month of August, however, have made that impossible. Now the couple plans to have their wedding at St. Dorothy's in Wilmington, still with Father Vic officiating.

The formal ceremony will be followed by a reception at Wilmington's Sons of Italy Hall. A capacity crowd is expected.

While honeymoon plans have not been finalized, Aruba is a "leading possibility," Bob said.

Following their honeymoon, the couple hopes to settle in Wilmington. They are currently looking for an apartment, but Bob is keeping an interested eye on the progress of proposed condominiums for Broad Street.

"We'd like to buy," he said. "There's really not much rental property in Wilmington."

"Marriage is hardly a thing one can do now and then — except in America."

— Oscar Wilde

The bouquet

Bridal bouquets of the ancients smelled not so sweet as those of today.

Brides of olden times carried an arrangement of garlic, chives and other strong-smelling herbs to drive away evil demons.

Today's brides carry flowers, each type with its own special significance.

Orange blossoms signify fertility and happiness, for the orange tree blooms and bears fruit at the same time.

Lilies stand for purity.

Roses, to the ancient Greeks, signified beauty and happiness.

Ivy stands for good luck and eternal fidelity.

And apple blossoms? They stand for better things to come.

Lawrence nips Wildcats, 46-35

Saturday Wilmington's seventh grade travelling hoop team clashed with the Lawrence Boys' Club in a fast moving, hard played game with many turnovers on both sides. The Lawrence club came away with the hard fought win, 46-35.

James Robichaud led the Wildcats scoring with 14 points, followed by Jason Oliver, who opened Wilmington scoring and finished with 11 points. Mark Bobek hit for five points and teammates Chris Riccio and Mike George notched two each.

Scott Tuxbury hit his foul shot for one point. Joey McFadyen and KC Bolger helped out with many steals and good defensive play.

Sunday the Wildcats hosted North Reading in a close game, with Wilmington going down, 37-36. James Robichaud scored his personal high for the season of 16 points, followed by teammate Mark Bobek with 11.

Scott Tuxbury and Jason Oliver each sunk for three points. Peter Medberry hit for two points and Andy Parry notched one. Mike Burns, Joey McFadyen, KC Bolger and Mike George sparked the offensive play, while Chris Riccio and Bobek worked hard under the boards.

Saturday Wilmington travels to Pentucket for a 1 p.m. game and on Sunday the Wildcats will host Lynnfield in a 2:15 game at Shawsheen Tech.

Eighth graders split
 Wilmington's eighth grade traveling squad went 1-1 this past weekend. In a tough ballgame played at the Lawrence Boys' Club, the young Wildcats were defeated, 63-47.

The team played tough and was down by only four points at the half, but Lawrence broke open the game with 21 third quarter points. High scoring honors went to Stephen Hanafin with 20 points, followed by Jeff Bowen's 11 and Neil Penttinen's six. Mike Buonopane and Ronnie Pennie had three each and Mark Palmisano and Brian Pupa sank two apiece. Sean Colclough delivered good defensive work.

The boys played an outstanding game against North Reading Sunday, earning a 56-52 victory. The score was tied at 27 at the half, but the locals played pressure defense and got key fourth quarter baskets from Mark Palmisano (eight points), Ronnie Pennie (seven points) and Stephen Hanafin (20 points).

Also playing well at both ends of the court were Jeff Bowen (11 points), Mike Buonopane (eight points), and Sean Colclough (two points). Hard work and good team play by Neil Penttinen, Brian Pupa and Chris Riccio added to this latest Wildcat victory.

Tough loss for sixth graders
 Although it was a tough loss for the sixth grade traveling team, it was one of the best played games of the season. The Wildcats trailed by only four points at the half and were determined not to allow a repeat of last week's second half performance. The Wildcats allowed only six points in the third period and had posted 14 points of their own as they forced the opposition into taking outside shots.

In spite of being down 37-32 with 36 seconds remaining in the fourth period, the locals scored on the inbound pass and converted a steal to bring the score to within one point. After Everett was fouled at three seconds and missed a bonus shot, the Wildcats took the rebound and fired down court in a superb effort as time ran out.

Scoring for the Wildcats was turned in by Robert Baronoski (two), Tony Bonarrigo (two), Bobby Caruso (10), Michael Hawley (one), Eric Heselton (two), Andy Jamerson (two), and Greg Maiella (17).

Sharp defensive plays by Greg Scarfo, Matt Ryan and Bobby Palazzi assisted the home team effort, while Joey Cunningham and Kevin Lewis pulled down key rebounds.

The Wildcats are scheduled to host Lynnfield at Shawsheen Tech Sunday afternoon as they hope to improve their season record of 2-8.

Sports Shorts

It is now time to wear mittens, sip hot chocolate, and stay indoors - which is where the athletic entertainment is during this time of year. If you haven't already seen the Wilmington winter athletic squads in action, you may still do so.

Track

Mr. Kelley, assisted by Dave Callan, coaches both the boys and girls winter track squads. Both teams have been struggling through the season, in part because of the fact that most of the members of the squads are underclassmen.

Girls' track

At the Coaches Meet, Lauren Callahan ran a personal best in the mile, clocking 5:31. In the same meet, Andrea Hayden finished third in the two mile with a personal best time of 11:21. The girls' team is captained by Lauren Callahan. Julie Richburg, Dorice Reitchel and Pam Davis compete in the hurdles. (If you stay after school late, you can see this trio practicing in the first floor hallway from the nurse's office down to about room 116.) Competing in the 50 yard dash are: Lisa Medeiros, Kim Mytych, Sue McFayden, Tina Micelli, Carolyn Jones, and Celia Cornish. Nancy Jones, also a high jumper, competes in the 300 with Mary Virtus and Beth Bolton. Debbie Errico, another high jumper, doubles in the 600 with Kim Dinsmore. Running the 1000 are: Kelly Dineen and Winnie Corsaro. Lauren Callahan and Michelle Holbrook. Ann Marie Meeker race in the one mile event. The two mile race is run by Andrea Hayden. Running the mile relay are: Debbie Errico, Andrea Hayden, Beth Bolton, Nancy Jones and Sue McFayden. Dorice Reitchel, Kim Marie Meeker, Debbie Marsolini, and Kim Mytych are shot putters.

Boys' track

At the State Coaches meet three of the runners from the boys' squad distinguished themselves. Frank Dinsmore set a school record in the 1,000 with a time of 2:22. Eric Cripianuk ran the second fastest W.H.S. time ever in the 900. John Desforge also ran the second fastest W.H.S. time in his event, the 600.

The boys' team is captained by Frank Dinsmore. The 50 yard hurdles are run by Kevin Cripianuk, Bob Riley, and Rich Smith. Mike Michaud, Paul Flaherty, and Dave Patterson compete in the 30. The 300 is run by Eric Cripianuk and Kenny McGowan. Mike Michaud and John Desforge are the W.H.S. representatives in the 600. Competing in the 1,000 are: Frank Dinsmore, Al Prescott, and Steve Corby. Milers are: James Penny, David Trout, John, Pepe, Tom Sweet, Steven Cassidy, and Bob Pasquerella. In the two mile event, Brian Ribeiro and Chuck Stokes compete. High jumpers are Eric Cripianuk and Kevin Cripianuk. Mile relay runners are: John Desforge, Brian Ribeiro, Frank Dinsmore and Eric Cripianuk. Shot putters are: David Kelley, Dan O'Connell, Matt Parr, and David Curran.

Gymnastics

The W.H.S. gymnastics team is open to any athlete who is interested in improving strength, agility, and participating in this competitive sport. Head coach, Jan Moynihan and assistant coach, Karen Hanley encourage the members to develop their skills and help the members determine which event suits them best. Two team members, captains Carol DeVita and Lauree Murray, compete in all four events. The events are: uneven parallel bars, balance beam, vault, and floor exercises (which are performed to music). All four events require much concentration and skill.

Varsity Basketball Wilmington vs. Tewksbury

Friday, January 11, the Boys' Varsity Basketball team played Tewksbury. I entered the gym a few minutes before the game with my associate, J. We could feel the tension and controlled excitement in the air. Our team, practicing on their side of the court, looked good as they sank basket after basket. They looked confident and self-assured on their home turf. But, there was Tewksbury, on their half of the gym, and... well... they were tough. Both our team and the Wilmington crowd looked optimistic as the game started. J. glanced at me and murmured, "Tonight might be our lucky night." But a funny thing happened as the game progressed. Tewksbury started off with the lead and just kept widening and widening it. Our team looked marvelous and put up a good defense. They sprinted toward the basket each time we got the ball, but despite our heroic efforts, Tewksbury won in the end, 60 to 45.

As our team pushed its way through the crowd toward the locker room, J. and I weren't too depressed. After all, there would be other games, other victories and other defeats. So we were defeated that night, we put up a good fight.

"But we looked good," sighed J.

Soph Ski Trip

During the first weekend of January, 85 members of the Class of '87, along with friends, went on a ski trip to Kellington, Vermont. The group arrived at the Holiday Inn in White River Junction on Friday night. After settling in, a good night's rest was in order before a full day of skiing on Saturday.

Many weather reports said that the weekend's weather was to be the coldest of the season. However, this did not discourage the Wilmington skiers on Saturday. Mother Nature could not deter the skiers, but a mechanical problem with a bus on Sunday prevented half of the skiers from skiing a full day. Despite this problem, all who participated enjoyed themselves. Miss Fitzgerald, class advisor, and the chaperones who accompanied her on the trip have been bombarded with requests for more trips.

Impulse Dance Company

by Linda Romanowski '87

The Impulse Dance Company, a Cambridge based modern troupe, performed at W.H.S. on January 24. The group presented seven dances from its repertoire during the hour-long show. The dances were stylish and modern, blending jazz, contemporary, gospel, and improvisational dance techniques.

Impulse's show was both unique and creative. Their dances covered a wide variety of styles. They included jazz dance, a social dance of the 40's and even an improvisational dance, where the dancers invented parts of the dance as they went along.

After an exhausting seven dances, Impulse answered questions from the audience. Christian Polos, one of the

by Tom O'Reilly

While walking to school one day there was this thing that was in my way. It was a hole 100 feet round. Surrounded by huge piles of dirt, fresh from the ground.

I went to take a look, my curiosity heightened.

It was very dark. I was almost frightened. I built up my courage, which I don't lack. I looked inside: it was murky and black.

And then came the workers for a full day of toil.

I asked who they were. "We're from Joe's Oil."

"Oil in our ground. Are you sure it's safe?" One said. "Oh, sure," with a smile on his face.

I called some officials to check if my water was pure.

Once again, all I heard was "Oh, sure." So, I went along with it, as reckless as I am.

But when the results were in, I was in a jam.

I found out my water was bad. So I had to think of the options I had. To make a profit from this, I had to think. So now I have a five billion a year business. With the oil from my sink.

Moral - Every cloud has a silver lining, but don't light a match to it.

Some Things Never Change

by Steven Ferrante

The process is always the same. I casually stroll into my room, turn on the light, glance at the bed, hit the light switch, take one step and then leap into the air. While sailing through the air in the pitch darkness I say to myself, "I better land on the bed." Then I land, bounce off the bed, hit the bedpost, smash against the wall, fall back on the bed, tumble off the bed, knock over the waste paper basket and the chair, then I lie broken and battered on the floor.

Broken and battered, but not stunned, I expected that to happen. It always does. It always has happened ever since I realized that acrobatic bed leaping in the dark is much more thrilling than everyday, ordinary walking to the bed, getting in, shutting off the lights, and going to sleep.

Immediately upon impact with the floor, I hear my mother scream in a voice that shakes the walls of the corridor all the way down to my room. Her thunderous voice says, "Steve, what was that noise?"

I lift my head out of the debris and nonchalantly answer, "Nothing. Mother, go back to sleep. I just knocked over a chair."

"Well, watch what you're doing," she bores back. "You knock that chair over every night."

Yes mother, every night.

The process is always the same.

1984 in review

by Dawna Sugerman

Another year has passed, and with it passing several events at W.H.S. should be remembered.

In September, Mr. Paul Fleming, the new principal, made his presence felt. The student advisory board, nonexistent for the last five years, made a reappearance and is now very active.

Speaking of reappearance, the Wildcat News, the high school newspaper, reappeared as a supplement to the Town Crier.

A new drug policy, drafted during Acting Principal Richard DeRosa's brief tenure, was instituted in September.

S.A.D. (Students Against Driving Drunk) was organized this past fall. Its success is due, in large part, to the tireless efforts of Mr. Melhado and Ms. Basma-jan.

Congratulations should be passed around to various W.H.S. people for their achievements in 1984. Therefore, congratulations to:

Stacey Palmer for being voted Homecoming Queen of 1984-1985.

Sal Albano, for winning a successful sticker race for the Massachusetts Senate against Vincent Piro.

The Girls' Field Hockey team for making it to the State Finals.

And congratulations to their head coach Ms. J. Cassidy, whose guidance the field hockey team needed.

Congrats to the football team for successfully defeating Tewksbury High for the second year in a row.

To all of W.H.S. athletes, whether you won or lost, you're all winners in our eyes.

Congratulations to Jennifer St. Onge for receiving the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents' Award in December.

And special congratulations to the three high school faculty members, Ms. Dado, Mr. Ducey, and Mr. Lentine, who are in their 25th year of service as educators in the town of Wilmington. Thanks for all those years, and let's hope there are more to come.

Thanks to Mr. Wynn for his work in the newly formed Performing Arts Department. He's working hard directing the school play, Avesant and Old Lace.

Thank you also to the cafeteria workers who raised money for Globe Santa.

Special thanks to the WHS PAC for their work in trying to improve the high school. Their efforts are many.

A big thank you to the entire Wilmington community for passing the badly needed renovation project for the high school.

Thanks, also, to Miss Fitzgerald and Ms. Ferrante who do so much to make the Foreign Language Club a success.

To all the students, faculty and staff who weren't mentioned here, but gave e and achieved so much - thanks and congratulations. Nineteen eighty-four wasn't such a bad year and we wouldn't be doing badly. If 1985 were as successful.

Review of Dune

by Linda Romanowski

Dune is the new science fiction movie based on Frank Herbert's novel. Dune stars Kyle MacLachlan, Francesca Annis, and Jose Ferrer, who are all relatively new actors, and, of course, Sting, the singer for the Police, who plays the evil Feyd Rautha. Dune has been severely panned by the critics, and it has received mixed reactions from the public. But there are many Dune fanatics who claim it is a classic, yet unappreciated fantasy movie.

Dune is about the mystic teenager Paul Atreides who saves the desert planet of Dune from the evil Harkonnens. Paul Atreides is the young heir to the House Atreides; he and his family are the longtime enemies of the House Harkonnen. Paul, who is played by Kyle MacLachlan, develops his spiritual and mystical powers as he battles the Harkonnens until he becomes the legendary leader and prophet of Dune's inhabitants. Mind boggling, Dune is an arid, desert planet whose population consists of a nomadic race called the Fremen. The Fremen become allies to the Atreides, and, together, they attempt to rid Dune of the twisted and cruel Harkonnens.

Dune's plot is much more complex than its sounds. In fact, it may be halfway through the movie before the viewer fully understands what is happening on the screen. And it may take another trip to the theater before the viewer understands why it all happens. Dune, in effect, is a very complicated and intricate movie.

The characters in Dune are greatly varied. A few of the main characters are very flat and unappealing. Some characters with major parts don't have what it takes to hold one's interest; they always seem a bit mysterious. On the other hand, the villains and some characters with minor parts are highly interesting and entertaining. The villain in Dune, the Baron Harkonnen, and his nephew, Feyd Rautha, were so cleverly devised and portrayed that, even in their evilness, they are extremely likeable. Some other minor characters, such as the Bene Gesserit Reverend Mother and the Baron Harkonnen's henchman, Piter DeVries, are so unusual and odd in both appearance and behavior that they get one's full attention when they are on screen. If only the main characters were a bit more realistic and more easily understood, Dune would be even a better movie.

One positive quality Dune has is its good special effects and scenery. The planet Dune's desert surface is well done and other special effects, such as the Baron Harkonnen flying because he is so overweight that he is unable to walk, are convincing. Despite Dune's complexity of plot and variety in its characters, it is still a well-made movie. Dune will appeal greatly to some people and will be disliked by others. If you are interested in sci-fi movies and willing to accept its complexity, Dune may be for you.

Papermaking Demo

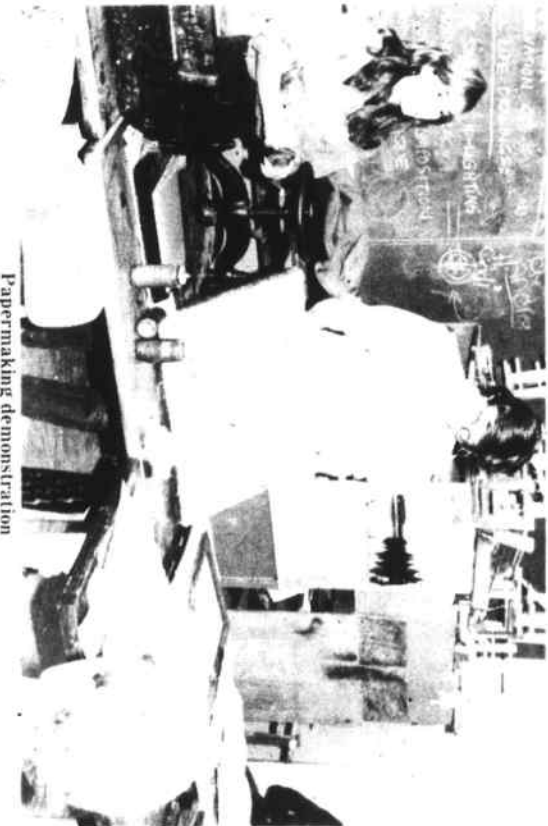

On Friday, December 7, a visiting artist, Mr. Brenton Welsh and his assistant, Ms. Pamela Shore, visited the W.H.S. art department. These two papermakers presented a history of paper and lectured on the significant qualities of paper composition and its cellulose nature. Both Brenton and Pamela shared with the students some examples of their studio's work. Their handmade paper was quite exquisite.

After the lecture on the history and composition of paper, a demonstration of how to make a piece of paper was given. Then, Mr. Welsh and Ms. Shore invited interested class members to create their own paper. This was exciting as students experimented with pigmented banana wood pulps and various organic additions, such as grass roots and dried flower petals to make their own paper.

Shriners' flea market

A spirited tip of the "old fedora" to the Shriners of Aleppo Temple who have proven that among their many other talents — they can organize one whale of a flea market.

Any follower of flea markets, yard sales, etc., who missed the event sponsored by Aleppo Temple, last Saturday, shouldn't have.

The sale, held at the Shriners Auditorium, was, just as advertised, "gigantic;" it offered something for everyone and it was noticeably bright and cheerful.

The event was extremely well attended but traffic was completely under control inside and out. Well done, Shriners — very well done indeed!

Cancellation of Section Eight housing — never been done

by Arlene Surprenant

The Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA) is having second thoughts about terminating the Section Eight HUD housing program.

At a brief meeting Monday night, Executive Director Lillian Buckley explained that since this was the first time a town has ever tried to end the program, state officials are uncertain about the proper procedure to follow.

Of special concern is what happens to tenants when their lease is up. Buckley was unable to get a commitment from the EOCD to pick up the leases. As it stands now, once their lease is up, tenants will have to seek other housing.

According to WHA member Elaine Hachey, "It's not right to do anything to make anyone homeless."

Buckley suggested reconsideration of their previous vote to turn over the Section Eight program to the state.

Dan Gillis said that before they do this, they should be properly advised and have enough money to fund the program. Lack of funds was the reason for terminating the program in the first place.

Buckley suggested setting up a meeting with state officials to "clear the air" and obtain some answers, a suggestion WHA members agreed to.

Another concern of the WHA was the new Chap. 705 low to moderate income housing.

Gillis brought up the possibility of using the old South School on Chestnut Street as one of the homes.

After some discussion on the idea, Gillis made the motion to draw up an article for the annual town meeting warrant to have the South School turned over to the WHA for a period of two years, after which it would revert back to the town. Gillis volunteered to draw up the article and pass it on to the selectmen at their next meeting.

After the meeting, Gillis explained that the building would only be used in case extra housing is needed. Since it needs major refurbishing, it could cost as much as $30,000 to get it in shape for a family to move in.

And finally, Lillian Buckley named Howard LaFaver as her choice for the Modernization Committee at Deming Way.

Alleged hit and run driver arrested after vehicle flips over on bridge

Tewksbury police are charging a Wilmington man with a number of motor vehicle violations after the jeep type vehicle he was allegedly driving hit and run two cars before it flipped over and crashed into trees off the Brown Street bridge last Thursday.

Theron S. Hamlin, 18, of 35 Grace Dr., Wilmington was arrested by Sgt. Dennis Peterson and Officer George Hazel on January 31 at 5:10 p.m. after he was released from St. John's Hospital where he was treated for injuries allegedly received in the series of mishaps.

Hamlin faces charges of driving while intoxicated, operating so as to endanger, speeding, failure to stop for a stop sign and two counts of leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage. Billerica has also charged him with one count of leaving the scene of an accident after he allegedly bailed out of his vehicle when it rolled over and struck several trees off the Brown Street bridge in Billerica.

Police say the series of mishaps started at 2:40 p.m. when the vehicle Hamlin was allegedly driving struck another vehicle in the parking lot of Cottage Place at the corner of Main Street and James Street in Tewksbury. Police allege Hamlin left the scene of that accident and proceeded down Main Street to Chandler Street, then down Chandler Street to Whipple Road where he allegedly ran a stop sign and struck another vehicle before proceeding down Whipple Road.

While being pursued by police, the vehicle proceeded down Whipple Road toward Nichols Street and Brown Street where it went out of control, flipped over onto its roof and struck trees lining the embankment of the Shawsheen River.

Police allege Hamlin bailed out of the vehicle, landed in the chilly waters of the Shawsheen River and proceeded on foot through a semi-frozen wetland before coming upon the end of Charme Road.

Police, who were searching the area for the suspect, received reports at 2:55 p.m. that a man was banging on the door of a Charme Road home seeking assistance. Hazel apprehended Hamlin on Charme Road shortly after receiving that call.

Hamlin was transported to St. John's Hospital in Lowell for treatment of injuries received in the accident, was later released into police custody and arrested.

Planners cast an eye on two-family homes

Apartments in single family homes, legal or illegal, have become a point of curiosity for the members of the Wilmington planning board. The subject was discussed on February 5.

As a part of the discussion the question arose as to whether or not those homes are being assessed as single family or two family homes. The board decided to write to the board of assessors and ask them.

Also discussed briefly was the subject of fire alarms in homes. Most fires that are reported from homes in Wilmington come via telephone, the board has been told. The board is planning a possible discussion with an official of the fire department.

Chief Stewart addresses Chemical People Task Force

by Arlene Surprenant

Saying Wilmington's made some "initial accomplishments" in its crack-down on drug traffic and alcohol abuse, Police Chief Bobby Stewart stressed that more still needs to be done. This was the essence of a message given to a mixed audience of students and adults at last night's Chemical People meeting.

Stewart praised groups such as the Chemical People Task Force and local civic associations for their efforts towards increasing community awareness of the drug problem. He also said the new high school drug policy is working "exceptionally well."

He did stress, however, that we have to "get beyond the point of denial" and realize that Wilmington still has a "serious problem" with drug and alcohol abuse. Anytime anyone is addicted to drugs and alcohol, Stewart said, that constitutes a serious problem.

Stewart pointed to one drug dealer his department picked up with 28 ounces of cocaine and $11,000 cash on him. With evidence like this, he said, "we can't say that it's not here in Wilmington."

Several statistics highlighting his department's enforcement efforts were cited by Chief Stewart.

In 1984, narcotics arrests increased by 55 percent. Arrests of people driving under the influence increased by 20 percent. There was a 46 percent decrease in those held in protective custody for alcohol related incidents in the juvenile group, but a 15 percent increase in the adult group. Since the national substance abuse campaign started in 1983, there were 15 arrests on drug charges at the high school in 1983 as compared with three arrests in 1984. And finally, two major drug dealers were arrested last year.

There are always difficulties in any investigation, Stewart told his attentive audience. Sometimes the police don't have enough documentation or "probable cause" to follow through on a telephone tip. In this case they may have to place an informant in the house and it could take as long as six months to develop an investigation.

Sometimes information becomes "stale" and won't hold up in court.

Police investigations, he said, are time consuming and very expensive to the community in terms of overtime and "buy" money.

In his capacity as chairman of the Drug and Alcohol Committee for the Massachusetts Chief of Police Association, Stewart has also tried to take some action statewide.

Through several pieces of legislation, Stewart is trying to get some of the fines and monies from those driving under the influence and those involved with drugs diverted back to the community and local police force to help defray some of their investigative costs.

He's also trying to speed up the process of analyzing seized drugs. Presently, departments send these drugs to the Pure Food and Drug Administration and "right now we have a three to four month delay in getting the analysis back." Such a delay can cause a case to be dismissed in court.

In outlining his goals for 1985, Stewart told those present "don't let up." He pointed out the need to continue community awareness, especially in the lower grade levels as elementary pupils are being exposed to drugs and alcohol at an earlier age. He exhorted the students in the audience to give input to the Chemical People, as this is a citizen's group with no age limit, and to talk to younger students to help relieve some of their fears and peer pressure upon entering high school.

He emphasized his department will do all it can to expand efforts at the enforcement level. Stewart said he already has two officers working fulltime with 40 to 50 caseloads involving drug dealers. He plans to work more closely with the district attorney's office and intends to expand some "deterrent" type of enforcement in the immediate future.

Civil War theme at North Intermediate

by Arlene Surprenant

Would you like to step back into the Ante-Bellum period? Would you like to meet Abraham Lincoln, hear a rousing rendition of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," sample southern foods, or purchase homemade arts and crafts?

If so, you're welcome to join the students at the North Intermediate School this Friday, Feb. 8, for a special North meets South Civil War Program.

The program, under the direction of art teacher Joanne Canzaniello, will take place during the entire school day in lieu of regular classes and will include many exciting aspects.

Bart McCarthy, a professional actor, will do a special presentation on Abraham Lincoln at 8:30 a.m. Also slated are a presentation on the Gettysburg Address in the afternoon, country dance and minuet demonstrations, arts and crafts and food sales, and other special programs, many requiring the use of costumes and scenery (donated by the Spotlighters).

North Intermediate students are busy decorating the school, primarily the auditorium - cafeteria area where the major programs are scheduled to take place. Each school department and club, plus many parents who are sewing the costumes, are involved in some way in this unique program.

According to Principal Dr. Joseph Connelly, something will be going on each minute of the day.

The program, he said, came about when the teachers tried to come up with a major "inter-disciplinary" program involving the whole school. And since that time this program has been planned, with intensive preparation underway for the past two months.

Looking ahead, during the third week of March, a foreign language week complete with ethnic foods is being planned for the entire student body.

No shoveling needed With the residents gone south for the winter, snow is piling up on the doorstep of this "house with a view" in North Wilmington.

April 18, 1942. On that day, Lt. Col. Doolittle, U.S. Army, raided Tokyo, Japan. He was in command of 18 U.S. Army Air Force bombers, which had taken off from the deck of the U.S.S. Hornet aircraft carrier. The people of the United States were electrified by the news of the raid.

It was the beginning of a long, long trail back, after Pearl Harbor. It was quite a day in the history of the United States.

Yes, there were U.S. Marines in Iceland. There were a few U.S. soldiers in Britain. There were also a few in Australia. America was beginning to fight back. It was Doolittle who delivered the message.

On that day, practically no one in the United States knew of the island of New Caledonia. It is a French colony, in the South Pacific, 910 miles northeast of Australia. Recently, it has been in the news.

A little larger than Massachusetts, it was sparsely settled. The natives are Melanesians, called Kanaks. There were other people, too, imported by the French government to work on the mines, Ammanese and Tonkinese, to name two groups. Today they are called Vietnamese. There were also a few U.S. soldiers on that island, mostly men of the U.S. National Guard.

Most of those soldiers became a part, later, of the Americal Division (American forces in Caledonia). Later that year, the Americal Division was to play its part in the bitter fighting in Guadalcanal.

New Caledonia is one of the few places in the world where nickel can be found and easily mined. Nickel is used to harden steel. In times of war it is priceless. It was for that reason that the United States Army sent soldiers of the National Guard to New Caledonia in March, 1942.

From Woburn, Massachusetts, there were two companies, Company B and Company G, 101st Regiment, Massachusetts National Guard. Company B was a motor company; Company G was infantry.

Most of those soldiers came directly from Woburn. Many were young men, 18 to 20 years old. Practically no one spoke French. No one spoke any of the native languages.

Col. Wilfred A. Walker of the Choate Hospital was in command of the Woburn National Guard. They had sailed from San Francisco a little over a month after Pearl Harbor.

Two months later, many of them were in New Caledonia. Some spent five days in Melbourne, Australia, while enroute to New Caledonia. Other National Guardsmen went directly to the island.

Two of those Woburn soldiers are today a part of Middlesex East, a supplement to the Times-Chronicle and other papers. Paul Haggerty is the publisher; Italo Galante is an advertising manager.

A third person who was in New Caledonia at that time is also a part of Middlesex East. He was not a member of any National Guard company.

TROUBLED NEW CALEDONIA

A French territory since 1853, the South Pacific archipelago of New Caledonia now confronts the question of whether to become independent or remain under French control. The islands, about 800 miles east of Australia, are a land of sharp contrasts and sharper disagreements between the native Melanesians, or Kanaks, and the French settlers. The territory, with its subtropical climate and profusion of rare plants, is a botanist's dream. Beneath the earth of the main island lies one of the world's largest nickel deposits.

Lady Di's cousin

By JIM ROUILLARD

Ever want to be linked to royalty? How about to outlaws — or would-be assassins?

Well, you may already be so, without even knowing it.

With the announcement in 1981 of the intended marriage of Lady Diana Spencer to His Royal Highness, Charles, Prince of Wales, American genealogists quickly scurried to uncover the future Queen of England's American cousins.

And they are legion — many of them, in fact, either distinguished or notorious.

There is such an American cousin to the Princess, in Tewksbury, on North Billerica Road.

Mrs. Betsy Powell Polglase, is "about a 10th and maybe even

...and a look at New Caledonia today

By MERCER CROSS

National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — New Caledonia, a remote remnant of French colonialism in the South Pacific, is a divided island territory tensely awaiting a decision on its future.

The choices: whether to join most of its neighboring archipelagos as an independent nation or to remain under the control of France, which has ruled it for the past 132 years.

Despite New Caledonia's obscurity, the decision will reach far beyond the immediate region into other areas of international rivalry.

Racial tensions underlie the dispute. They have cost about 20 lives in recent months.

Violence is no stranger to the island cluster. Cannibalism and tribal warfare were common among the ancestors of the Melanesians, or Kanaks, the native people who lived there when James Cook, the English explorer, first visited the islands in 1774.

Looked like Scotland

When Cook saw the main island, a 30-by-250-mile stretch of land about 800 miles east of Australia, he dubbed it New Caledonia. Its pine trees and rugged terrain reminded him of Scotland, which the Romans had called Caledonia.

Both the British and the French were interested in claiming the territory. In 1853, France beat Britain to the punch.

Soon the French began to take choice grazing lands away from the natives, forcing the Melanesians onto reserves. The French aggrandizement led to several bloody revolts, including big ones in 1878 and 1917.

Today, Melanesians compose only about 43 percent of the territory's approximately 145,000 residents. Whites of European extraction, chiefly French, account for nearly 36 percent. The rest are other ethnic groups, mainly Polynesians, Wallis and Futuna Islanders, Indonesians, and Vietnamese.

Most of the French population lives in and around the capital city of Noumea, on the southwestern side of the main island. Most of the Melanesians live in villages and on subsistence farms.

Noumea and its nearby beaches are often described as a South Pacific version of the Riviera, with exclusive French shops, fine restaurants, fancy hotels, and topless beaches. The subtropical climate is excellent.

Includes many islands

Included in the French Overseas Territory are the Isle of Pines, 30 miles southeast of the main island; the Loyalty Islands — Uvea, Lifu, and Maré — 60 miles east; the Belep Islands, 30 miles north; and the Chesterfield Islands, a cluster of uninhabited atolls more than 300 miles northwest, in the Coral Sea.

New Caledonia is not only one of the largest island territories in the watery vastness of the South Seas; it is one of the wealthiest. Nickel was discovered in 1863, and New Caledonia became one of the world's largest producers. In recent years, however, recession has hit the nickel industry worldwide. One side effect in New Caledonia has been significant unemployment, which in turn has added to internal tensions.

Rugged mountains, some more than 5,000 feet high, run the length of the long, narrow island. Millions of years ago, New Caledonia was attached to Australia.

When the islands drifted apart, New Caledonia took with it a high percentage of native Australian plants that are now peculiar to it alone, making it a dream territory for botanical research. "It's one of the most interesting pieces of real estate you could hope for," says Dr. Gordon D. McPherson, assistant curator of the Missouri Botanical Garden at St. Louis, who lived on the island for five years.

Despite the glories of its climate and natural beauty, however, many of the first

GR Associates have record fourth quarter

Century 21 GR Associates of Stoneham reports a record Fourth Quarter for 1984. President George Riccardelli stated that sales for the Fourth Quarter were higher than any quarter since he has been in the real estate business for over 19 years.

The volume was more than double of the same quarter a year ago and Mr. Riccardelli attributes this to lower interest rates, strong demand for property in the area, and the reputation of his office and the Century 21 system.

Century 21 International reports the strongest markets for both sales and price appreciation are the Northeast, including New England.

Mr. Riccardelli feels that 1985 could be another record year with volume already double for the first two weeks of January.

In conjunction with Century 21 International Career Opportunity Week, Century 21 GR Associates is holding a Career Session January 23 at the office facilities to recruit new or experienced brokers to handle the increase in business.

This fortress built by Nature for herself

Against infection and the hand of war,

This happy breed of men, this little world,

This precious stone set in the silver sea...

This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England,

This nurse, this teeming womb of royal kings"

William Shakespeare, in the above passage from "King Richard III," provides some pretty impressive public relations for England and her royals.

But that, of course, was almost four centuries ago — even before our humble Pilgrim and Puritan forebears reached these shores — and well before King George III and his titled minions lost these colonies.

As good and democratic Americans, in fact, we are not supposed to drink at the font of royalty (the Constitution itself forbids the granting of any title of nobility by the United States) — yet who among us would refuse an invitation to Windsor Castle or Buckingham Palace?

But to return to Betsy Polglase: though I haven't met the future Queen of England, I have met Betsy Polglase, who

MOVIE REVIEWS

'Protocol' 'Flamingo Kid'

"Protocol" Starring Goldie Hawn, Chris Sarandon, Richard Romanus, Andre Gregory and Gail Strickland. Directed by Herbert Ross. Produced by Anthea Sylbert. Screenplay by Buck Henry. Rated PG (profanity, violence).

Protocol is a fun, wholesome, sentimental film that makes one wonder why there aren't more like it. True, this is no cinematic masterpiece, but it is so entertaining, and Goldie Hawn is so adorable, that it is only a very hardened heart that could not be gladdened by this comedy.

Hawn portrays Sunny, a cocktail waitress who is thrust into the diplomatic life through circumstances far beyond her control. It is unfortunate that some of these circumstances get a little silly, and one gets the impression that director Herbert Ross let things get out of control, which resulted in a somewhat uneven picture. This film was never meant to be realistic, but tighter editing and fewer outrageous escapades in the second half of the film could only have helped. What makes this film better than average is Hawn. This woman still has the same giggle, enthusiasm and comedic timing that won her an Academy Award for her first film, Cactus Flower. Hawn seems to be relegated to films which employ her trademark giggle, as her more serious film Swing Shift was not a box office bonanza. But, Hawn as we know her is always entertaining, and her appearance in Protocol is no exception.

In a supporting role is Gail Strickland, as Mrs. St. John, the Ambassador of Protocol. Strickland, sporting designer outfits and walking as if she had a pole shoved up her back, gives an insightful presentation of an ambitious, modern stuffed shirt dress.

Protocol reminds this reviewer of Frank Capra's movies. No, it is not nearly as clever, but it has some of the mate of an American ship which arrived in Noumea, New Caledonia, in the last days of March 1942 — the S.S. Carolinian.

Noumea Harbor is a part of a larger harbor, a bay that is about the size of Cape Cod Bay. It is 23 miles from the entrance islands to the city of Noumea. There were many ships in that harbor, for more arrived every day. Possibly there were 30 or 40 — one could not tell because of the islands that hid parts of the harbor.

One of the ships that was present was the U.S.S. Chicago, a heavy cruiser. She was lost during the battles for Guadalcanal.

There was only one dock which was suitable for cargo ships, and it was really for coastwise steamers. Only one ship could dock at any time. There was a small shed to protect cargo — a very small shed. Work could be done only during daylight hours.

Having space for only one ship complicated things. Most ships were "invasion loaded," meaning that there was cargo which was expected to be used immediately by the Army. That too, complicated things.

U.S. engineers, from the interior, would send down word that they wanted a power shovel, a bulldozer, or some such instrument. What they wanted would be on ship "X," out behind an island somewhere.

But ship "X" could not be allowed to go to the dock, because ship "Y" was at the dock, and the engineers wanted a power roller which was on ship "Y." It was great fun, and cargo kept piling up behind the dock, while the engineers waited for their tools.

When the Carolinian finally docked, it had been waiting for about three weeks. Behind the cargo shed, not too far distant, was a big pile of canned food in hotel-sized cans. It was almost mountain high, sitting in the rain. The cardboard cases were falling apart; the labels were washing off the cans.

Army cooks, it would seem, would be serving "chef's delight" to the troops, if ever they got some of those canned goods. The chief mate estimated there were 4,000 tons in the pile.

The dock was in charge of a first lieutenant of the infantry from an Ohio National Guard company. A nice guy, he had no knowledge (to speak of) of handling cargo, and was constantly getting messages from the engineers to "get us that hunk of machinery we are waiting for."

The longshoremen (workers) were recruited. Every day there would be a change — a different group of longshoremen — reporting aboard ship to unload cargo.

On Monday, they could be Kanaks. On Tuesday, they could be Ammanese. On Wednesday, they could be men from Java. No one spoke English, nor did many of them have any idea of what they were to do.

Thus, the chief mate of any ship which docked in Noumea had a problem. To a lesser extent, it was the same problem the lieutenant of infantry had on the dock — the inability to talk with people who were doing the work. Only the lieutenant didn't have the advantage of knowing much about handling cargo.

But the chief mate of the Carolinian did have one advantage. He had studied French in Willington High School in the mid 1920s — three years. When those gangs of natives came aboard, the chief mate would just circulate around until he found a man who spoke French. That simplified things. That man and the chief mate would go around together and explain to others what they were supposed to do, and how to do it.

There came a day when an officer of the U.S. Army came aboard for an informal visit. Would the chief mate like to go ashore and take charge of things on the dock? He hinted there could be a commission as major in the Army.

The chief mate did not accept. He didn't think he was cut out to be in the U.S. Army.

(Later, in the Fiji Islands, he may have learned why the commission had been offered. The Fiji Islanders who came aboard were big, six-foot men — friendly as could be. Even when they talked English, which some of them did, they opened their conversation with "Bulla Bulla," a form of greeting. The chief mate would "Bulla Bulla" back.

A sergeant in the New Mexico National Guard, stationed on the ship, then asked the chief mate how many languages he could speak. He had talked with the natives of New Caledonia in their own language, and now the same was going on, in Fiji!

That same impression must have been made on that officer who offered a commission back in New Caledonia. (Just because the chief mate was talking in French, the assumption was that he was talking in native languages.)

The chief mate, it can be told, had only a radio in his stateroom. It was a "non-regenerative" radio, the only ones allowed on ships in those days. Ordinary radios, not allowed in those days, radiated power while they were being tuned. While the dials were being turned, there was a squeal and a squawk which could be detected by enemy ships. Those enemy ships could take bearings and locate the source of the radiated power — which in turn could lead to the sinking of ships.

The morning after the Doolittle raid on Tokyo, the chief mate went out to the head of the dock where there was a sentry shack. A young soldier sat on the equivalent of a kitchen table, kicking his heels against the table legs. On his cloth helmet were the words, "Woburn, Mass."

He was of an Italian family in South Woburn — his name has been forgotten.

"Hey," he asked, "what's going on in the world?"

"Oh," said the chief mate, "somebody dropped some bombs on Tokyo, and boy, are those Japs really mad!"

"They did? The sonsa bitches!"

Royal cousin

eschews titles, even the simple one of "Mrs.," and asked to be addressed as Betsy — and as interesting as the Princess may be, she can be no more intriguing, charming, or amusing than her American cousin.

Betsy Polglase is herself a genealogist — among several other things — and when I asked her to trace her exact degree of kinship to her royal cousin (she is related at least eight ways) she quickly looked up the closest degree and exclaimed: "Oh, good, it's through the scandalous line!"

Betsy takes her kinship to the princess with a high dose of humor (the Tewksbury resident and mother of three is also descended in five royal lines from Charlemagne, and in four from Mayflower passengers, including the famous John Alden and Priscilla).

But "Having raised cats, and discovered that nothing goes beyond the third generation, it's more hilarious than anything else," to be descended from past royalty and related to future monarchs, she said.

Betsy stresses that the fun in studying your roots is just that: sheer fun. As for the royal connections, "it's nice to have in your background," but other than that it's not really worth much, she said.

She has spent years researching her ancestry, in fact, and apparently felt rather disappointed that the majority of her antecedents seem to have been distressingly tame and respectable.

True, her great-grandfather, Oliver Samuel Powell, was imprudent enough to get himself chopped up in his own sorghum mill. He'd just returned from church, in the late 18th century, Betsy said, and he decided to inspect the mill's machinery. (Sorghum is a type of grass, cultivated for grain and forage, and as a source of syrup.)

Mr. Powell's greatcoat flapped in the wind as he was bending over the machinery, and the long tails caught in the works, pulling him in along with his garment.

But Betsy's search for true notoriety didn't come until she discovered "the scandalous line," when she found that Oliver Powell's maternal grandfather, Nathaniel Newell of

Charlotte, Vermont, "had a fellow thrown into jail and fined $1,000, in 1799, for 'debauching his wife.'" It's Betsy's suspicion that Newell, who was also a judge, and a calvary officer during the War of 1812, may have set the whole thing up, to compromise his wife and get rid of her, since he soon afterwards took to himself a "much younger woman."

Inconveniently, she added, with a wry grin, the court records outlining the case were burned — so the full extent of the "delicious" scandal may never be known.

But, to return to the tameness of respectability, genealogist Gary Roberts explained that Diana, Princess of Wales, may have between 20 and 30 million American cousins. If you have as many as 200 first generation New England ancestors who came over during the so-called "Great Migration," between 1620-1650, it's virtually certain that you are related to all the approximate 100 million of Americans who share the earliest New England ancestry — and your chances are one in four of being related to the Princess, Roberts said.

You are guaranteed, in any case, to have at least cousins who are themselves cousins to the royals.

A few examples: Betsy Polglase and the Princess are both cousins to actor Humphrey Bogart, poets Emily Dickinson and Archibald MacLeish, American patriot Nathan Hale, writers F. Scott Fitzgerald and Erle Stanley Gardner, actress Julie Harris, composer Edward MacDowell, anthropologist Margaret Mead, and banker J. P. Morgan, to name just a few.

As for the Princess, she is related to at least 12 American presidents, 13 if you count Richard Nixon, which is problematical, according to Roberts, since one of Nixon's ancestors is probably, but not utterly guaranteed, to be the link to a mutual ancestor.

Among her royal highness' American cousins, ironically, are both Nancy Reagan, the present first lady, and John Hinckley, the man who tried to assassinate Mr. Regan. Though

HAMMOND CASTLE

The 1924 silent film "The Thief of Bagdad" will be shown at the Hammond Castle Museum in Gloucester on Friday, February 8th at 8 P.M.

Douglas Fairbanks plays the thief who pretends to be a prince to win the princess's love and, when discovered, is sent on a quest which ends in his rescuing Bagdad and the princess from the Mongols.

Directed by Raoul Walsh, this fairy-tale fantasy is known for its splendid sets and scope of production. Trees were painted, objects and architecture were designed out of human proportion, and a highly-polished black floor was devised to reflect buildings. Art Nouveau sets the style of decoration in the movie, and the Great Hall of the Castle with its Medieval-Renaissance architecture sets the atmosphere for this magical entertainment. To add to the affects, the movie will be accompanied by the Castle's 8,200 pipe organ.

Tickets for "The Thief of Bagdad" are $4.00 an adult and $2.00 per child. Please call 283-7673 for reservations.

STOP SMOKING

Winchester Hospital in cooperation with The Stop Smoking Clinic will offer two free introductory stop smoking sessions which each be an informative one-hour overview of The Stop Smoking Clinic's program at no cost or obligation. These first sessions will be held in the Kingsbury Seminar Room of the hospital.

The Stop Smoking Clinic is a non-profit community service which helps people learn how to stop smoking. The month-long program, which meets twice a week, is taught by highly trained former smokers who quit through this program. The program uses group and individualized methods to help each participant overcome his or her smoking habit.

The program is unique in many ways. It enjoys a long-term success rate which is triple that of programs once recommended by nation health experts. The Stop Smoking Clinic also offers a "hotline" to each participant and graduate, providing constant support for their new smoke-free lives.

The Stop Smoking Clinic says, "We are proud of the fact that since beginning the program, thousands of smokers have learned to break their habit. You too can stop smoking. The Stop Smoking Clinic guarantees it."

PLAYBOY

The Lyric Stage, located at 54 Charles Street, presents John Millington Synge's lyrical masterpiece, "The Playboy of the Western World," opening on Wednesday, Feb. 13 and running through March 17.

The play is a rousing Irish romp about a young man who charms an entire village with his courageous tales of murder and bloodshed — only to be revealed as a teller of tall tales. What follows is a humorous look at what happens when the residents of the village take justice into their own hands — and how a simple twist of fate saves the day.

The play is presented in its restored version for the first time in the United States.

The Playboy of the Western World runs Wednesdays-Sundays (Wed-Fri 8 P.M., Sat.

mat at 5 P.M., Sat. eve. at 8:30, and Sunday mat at 3 P.M.). Tickets range from $7.50-$10.00, and are available through the Box Office (742-8703) through Bostix or can be reserved by calling Concert Charge (497-1118).

For more information, contact the Lyric Stage at 742-8703.

SPECIAL NEEDS PARENTS GROUP

The Mystic Valley Mental Health Center Association is sponsoring a parents group for parents of children from three to five years old with special needs. The format of the group is designed for sharing information and discussion on daily life issues pertaining to the needs of the children and their families.

The group will be co-lead by Christine Klostermann, MSW and Vickie Vining, BA Behavioral Services, staff members of the Mystic Valley Training and counseling Center for the Developmentally Delayed.

The group will meet Thursday evenings, beginning mid-February, 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. at 108 Pleasant St., Arlington. For more information and registration please call Judith Gerson at 641-0970.

'FIDDLER' AUDITIONS

The North Reading Theatre Workshop is pleased to announce auditions for its spring production of "Fiddler on the Roof," the Broadway musical which broke all prior attendance records, and created a new generation of musical theatre audience.

"Fiddler" features a cast of 11-12 male and female leads, as well as an active singing and dancing chorus. Also needed are people who would like to be active behind the scenes, including stage crew, lighting, costumes, props, and set design-construction. This is an ideal opportunity to "ease" into a production without having to appear on-stage. Our invisible supporting cast is just as important as our actors and actresses, and play just as vital a role to the success of a production.

To learn more about the NRTW, to try-out for a part, or to volunteer your many talents, please join us at the open audition on Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 11 and 12, at North Reading High School, Park St., North Reading at 7:00 p.m. Please come prepared to sing a selection from the show, and to do some light movement exercises on the stage. For more information, please contact 664-3949.

SALEM STATE COURSES

Courses in "Fundamentals of Book Design" (Feb. 16, 9-4 p.m.), "Jazz-Exercise" (Feb. 11-Mar. 25, 6:30-7:30 p.m.), "Photography as a Business" (Feb. 16, 9-3 p.m.), and "Visical" (Feb. 14-Mar. 7, 6:30-9:30 p.m.), will be offered at Salem State College this month. For further details, contact the Division of Graduate and Continuing Education, 745-0556, ext. 2315.

FIRST AID

A multi-media First Aid Course will be given at Winchester Hospital on Wednesday, February 6 and 13, from 7 to 11 p.m. The class will meet in the Kingsbury Seminar Room in the hospital's Hood Wing.

Sue Powers, RN, will teach several kinds of bandaging; mouth-to-mouth breathing; what to do in case of an obstructed airway; how to care for a broken limb, and first aid for insect bites and dog bites as well as treatment for chemicals in the eyes.

The class will see films and demonstrations, and will participate in practice of first aid methods.

The fee for the class is $12.00. Those who wish to attend may pre-register by calling the hospital's education department.

MONTHLY MEETING

The Melrose Easter Seal Stroke Club will hold its monthly meeting at the First Congregational Church, 121 West Foster Street, Melrose, Massachusetts on Wednesday, February 20, 1985.

Guest speaker will be Robert Obyck of Blue Cross and Blue Shield, whose subject will be "Medicare and Medex." He will include in his topic the benefits and understanding of the programs. New members and guests are always welcome. Refreshments and conversation will follow the program.

The Easter Seal Society has pioneered in developing Stroke Clubs for those affected by stroke. Stroke victims and their families have welcomed this planned means of sharing their concerns and accomplishments, as well as learning from each other and experts about how to live satisfying and optimally independent lives.

This form of post-stroke help in returning to the community and to family living is a valuable means of ensuring a continuation of social rehabilitation beyond the initial stage of physical recovery.

For more information contact Easter Seals, 20 Ballard Road, Lawrence, Ma. 01843.

CHORAL UNION MEMBERSHIP

The Mikado, Gilbert and Sullivan's sparkling comic opera, will be presented by the Choral Union of the University of Lowell this Spring, the group's conductor, Christopher McGahan, announced today. The work will be presented in a semi-staged version. The chorus will be the Choral Union. Soloists will be selected later.

No audition is necessary to join the Choral Union, according to McGahan. "The only prerequisite," he said, "is the desire to have an enjoyable time singing. We particularly welcome members of the community, who broaden the experience and outlook of the group. In this instance, where we are doing a semi-staged opera, the chorus will not be expected to move or dance in any way. Singing is what we want."

Those wishing to become members of the Choral Union should attend one of the first three rehearsals. The group meets on Monday nights in the Concert Hall of Durgin Hall. Rehearsals begin at 7:30 p.m. The first rehearsal was held Jan. 28. Membership will stay open through the Feb. 3 and Feb. 10 rehearsals. In case of postponement because of weather, the rehearsal will be held at the same time the next day.

There is no membership fee; however, members are expected to buy their music. Cost for the score, according to the conductor, should be "in the vicinity of $5.00." Those wishing further information should contact Dr. Christopher McGahan at the College of Music, phone 452-5000, ext. 2250.

WORD PROCESSING TRAINING

Middlesex Community College is accepting registrations for February and March day or evening 15 hour word processing courses. 45 WPM typing skills required to

DIZZY

Jazz great Dizzy Gillespie a master influence in American music, will appear at Andover's J. Everett Collins Center on Saturday, Feb. 16 for a special one-night performance in celebration of Black Arts Weekend.

The 68 year-old John Birks "Dizzy" Gillespie is respected all over the world for his contribution to classical jazz and the bebop revolution. Critics hail him "as living history in a way no other jazzman can claim."

Regarded as a prominent trumpet soloist with a rhythmic, harmonic style Gillespie is unparalleled in the jazz world.

Along with such greats as Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington and Charlie Parker, Gillespie is part of the select group of extraordinary talents who helped shape classical jazz music.

A unique component of Gillespie's appearance in Andover will be a special master class for area high school music students. During the afternoon of February 16th Gillespie will conduct a master class for the jazz bands of Andover High School and Phillips Academy.

The concert by Dizzy Gillespie, presented in association with Phillips Academy is part of the J. Everett Collins Center's celebration of February as Black History Month and Black History Weekend at Phillips. Also on schedule during the month at the Collins Center will be a one-night only performance by the Negro Ensemble Company of the Tony Award-winning "A Soldier's Play" on February 26.

Dizzy Gillespie in performance at the J. Everett Collins Center for the performing Arts, Friday, February 16 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $16 and $14, available at the Collins Center Box office Shawsheen Road off Rt. 133 near Rt. 93 in Andover. For tickets and information, phone (617) 470-1905.

New Caledonia from S-1

European settlers considered New Caledonia the furthest thing from an island paradise. From 1864 to 1898, France used both the main island and the Isle of Pines as a penal colony. Among the first inmates of the prisons were political prisoners from the Paris Commune of 1871. Many of today's established French families in the territory are descendants of prisoners. During World War II, New Caledonia was a strategic base for U. S. military operations in the Pacific. In 1946, France declared it an overseas territory, a decision that was ratified in a 1958 referendum. And such it remains, helping France to maintain its maritime presence in the Pacific.

Colonialism declines

Since the war, however, colonialism has been a declining force in the South Pacific, as one archipelago after another has gained independence. Besides New Caledonia, the only remaining French territories in the Pacific are the Wallis and Futuna Islands and French Polynesia.

One of the latest Pacific territories to become independent is Vanuatu, formerly New Hebrides, which cut loose from joint administration by Britain and France in 1980. Independence was not gained without a struggle. And Vanuatu, seeking to avoid entanglement with the superpowers, refuses to recognize either the United States or the Soviet Union.

Other new island nations have made the transition peacefully. Despite their independent status, many of them continue to rely heavily on economic support from their former parent countries.

One diplomat notes the unusual character of the governmental transitions in the South Pacific: no coups, no dictatorships, no Communists. The major Western powers want to see that trend continue.

That's why there is concern about the terrorist training of several militant young Melanesians in Libya. The regime in Libya is well known for its eagerness to help almost any group seeking to foment rebellion by terrorist means. But whatever connection exists between Kanaks and Libyans now seems "pretty tenuous," says one diplomat.

"The Kanaks surprised everybody by demonstrating their ability to be a disruptive political force," he adds. "What they've done is to establish themselves as much stronger political players. They've fundamentally changed the political equation."

Competing Kanak political parties support the drive for independence. But they are not a united force, and some Melanesians side with the French settlers and others in their preference for continued French control.

The socialist French government of Francois Mitterrand, elected in 1981, has supported independence. But its timetable, to have culminated in a 1989 referendum, was too slow for the separatists, and the result was their boycott of the Nov. 18 elections to the territorial assembly.

Violence has erupted sporadically in recent years. A French-born leader of the independence movement was murdered in 1981.

Fighting in Legislature

In 1982, protesting the election of a pro-independence administration, rightist militants broke into the Territorial Assembly, New Caledonia's legislative body, and fought with opposition politicians. In rioting outside the chambers, 10 people were arrested and 19 policemen were injured.

The current and most serious violence began on election day. One party, the militantly pro-independence Front de Liberation National Kanak et Socialiste (FLNKS), boycotted the elections in two polling areas. Kanak militants set up roadblocks, burned several French houses, occupied police stations, harassed voters, and kidnapped a French official. One Melanesian and one European were killed.

As a result of the FLNKS absentions in the two constituencies, an anti-independence party, the Rassemblement pour la Caledonie dans la Republique, won 71 percent of the territorial vote and 34 of 42 assembly seats.

Disregarding the election outcome, FLNKS on Dec. 1 installed its own "provisional government" for the self-proclaimed independent nation of Kanaky. A green, red, and blue flag replaced the French tricolor over the "government's" headquarters in La Conception, a suburb of Noumea.

Leader of FLNKS is Jean-Marie Tjibaou. Two of his brothers were among the 10 persons killed in a bomb-throwing ambush Dec. 5.

To curb the violence, France sent military reinforcements to New Caledonia.

After an emergency meeting of the French Cabinet on Dec. 1, President Francois Mitterrand and Prime Minister Laurent Fabius appointed a veteran diplomat, Edgard Pisani, as special envoy to New Caledonia. He was ordered to seek a negotiated settlement to the dispute.

Calls for 'new order'

In a televised speech to New Caledonians on Dec. 5, Pisani called for a "new order" for the territory, to be arrived at through a three-stage program designed to satisfy "the legitimate aspirations of the different communities."

A few days after his arrival, roadblocks were removed and relative calm was restored to the troubled island.

A few weeks later, however, the restless truce was replaced by even greater violence than before, violence that threatened to postpone or kill a compromise proposal for limited independence.

On Jan. 7, Pisani announced a plan that would combine sovereignty for New Caledonia with continued legal association with France. The French, under this arrangement, would be responsible for maintaining internal and external security on the islands.

"The best solution, doubtless the only solution, is independence, but independence associated with France," Pisani said in a radio speech. His plan called for a referendum in July and, if approved, independence on Jan. 1, 1986.

Four days after Pisani's speech, the 17-year-old son of a white cattle rancher was shot and killed, touching off widespread rioting. Police killed two FLNKS leaders Jan. 12. The territorial government declared a state of emergency. France dispatched 1,000 more troops. Mitterrand, declaring his support for the Pisani proposals, made a 24-hour flight to visit the territory on Jan. 19.

But Mitterrand's visit appeared only to stiffen the opposition to independence. Noisy crowds of anti-separatists demonstrated in Noumea during his 12-hour stay. At home in France, rightists raised the specter of Soviet interference.

To some Frenchmen, the scene was an unpleasant reminder of the 1954-61 civil war in French-ruled Algeria, and of the exodus of whites after Algeria won independence in 1962. Some of the whites displaced from Algeria moved to New Caledonia.

Diplomats now fear that the latest violence has hardened positions on both sides to the point that a July referendum cannot be held. Tjibaou, the FLNKS leader, backed away from his initial qualified endorsement of Pisani's plan and demanded immediate independence.

Adding to the murkiness of the future status of New Caledonia are the elections to be held in France early in 1986. Mitterrand's popularity has slumped. Unless independence is won before the elections, the Socialists could be replaced by a conservative government that opposes independence.

In that event, all bets would be off. Tensions would remain high. And, in all likelihood, bloodshed and terror would continue.

Royal cousin

both Hinckley and Mrs. Reagan are cousins to the princess, Roberts said, they are not related to each other.

Roberts said he also found an American cousin to the princess in Jesse James and some other "Wild West" characters — but his book mentions the cousins whose accomplishments have been more illustrious than those just mentioned and the list reads like a who's who in American and British art, society, politics, belles-lettres and industry.

Betsy and Diana are also cousins, by marriage, to Teddy Roosevelt.

And, totally unrelated to anything to do with the Princess of Wales, Betsy is niece, also by marriage, to the former prime minister of Iraq, Mohamed Fadhel Jamali.

But that's enough of famous relations.

Betsy's own accomplishments are far more impressive than being related to anyone. A superb professional photographer, she manages to invest her shots of fire-plugs, tomato hornworms, crustaceans — and even the forelorn faces of pigs — with a vibrant or wistful poetry.

A director of the Society of American Photographers, she has competed internationally and garnered international medals for some of her photos. She currently runs her own professional portrait studio on North Billerica Road, and manages to make her clients look like utterly relaxed professional models — apparently through the ease of her personality and her technique of "turning on the stereo and having a dress-up party" for her subjects, for about an hour before she begins shooting.

You can come to her studio, in fact, in blue jeans if you wish, Betsy said, since she can supply from her own collection of costumes the hats, the boas, the scarves, jackets or stoles to bring out the model in you.

Part of her skill in photography, obviously, derives from her eye for color — which is manifest both in her still-lives and in her portraits: "I decide what a person's best features are and play them up. The eyes are where the expression is in the person," she said. "Sometimes you catch a fleeting expression and you manage to entice that onto film."

But photography is only one of her prize-winning accomplishments. A former breeder of award-winning Siamese cats, Betsy is also a music major graduate of the University of Minnesota, sings (contralto), and has directed church choirs in Billerica for the past 15 years — at the Billerica Unitarian Church for the last 11.

She also teaches guitar, raises orchids — and tends an orchard of miniature fruit-trees in her backyard: apples, plums, peaches, pears and quince, as well as grapes, blueberries and raspberries.

Her husband, Donald Polglase, also a photographer, is a technical writer. She has three children, Scot, Dana and Lela Krueger. Scot and Dana were both scholar-athletes while at Tewksbury High School and both graduated from MIT. Scot is in graduate school at Berkeley; Dana, a chemist, owns his own company, Krueger Food Labs, which undertakes food chemistry analyses, and Lela, who lives in North Billerica, is an electronic technician in Burlington.

This story began about royal relations. But it is in the skills, imagination and high humor of the subject, Betsy Polglase, that the story really lies. So, independent of family, famous or notorious, I must return to Betsy's photography, and add that she takes still-life and portraiture well beyond mere competence with a camera.

To appreciate it fully, you have to see her work, first-hand, to know how Betsy Polglase — well more than three generations removed from royalty — can find poetry in a pig, glistening beauty in the features of a lobster, or unlock the joy in a single human face.

Fortunes forgotten

Stocks and Bonds, worth a cumulative $30 billion, are gathering dust in attic trunks all over America. The companies that issued the certificates may have changed their names or merged or consolidated with other corporations and lost their original identities. Many of the investors are unaware that the securities may be more valuable than ever.

Example: In 1957, a retired school teacher bought stock in a corporation named Metals & Controls. In 1960, the company's name disappeared from the listing in the newspaper's financial pages, so she concluded that the business went broke and her investment was wiped out. Some years later, she asked Tracers Securities Research Service to research her stock and it was soon discovered that the stock has become exchangeable for shares of Texas Instruments Company worth $256,000.

Occasionally, even after a company goes out of business and its shares are declared to be worthless, the sale of the company's assets bring more than was anticipated... and the amount exceeds creditors' claims. The surplus is placed with a trustee for distribution to the stockholders, if they can be found.

The various states have enacted abandoned property laws allowing them to collect stock values and dividends that remain unclaimed. As a result, millions of dollars have found their way into state treasuries, but are still recoverable by the rightful owners.

Tracers Securities Research Service, 39 Broadway, New York, NY 10006 determines the present values of old certificates. Simply send them a copy of the certificates in question and, for a research fee of $25 per company, they will provide a written report and instructions on how to cash them in.

Does your toddler love ice cream?

Do you recall as a toddler being treated to a luscious, soft-and-sticky, chocolate ice cream cone? Better yet, do you remember 10 minutes later, when your mother wiped the last drip of chocolate from your face and headed to the washer with a hopelessly messy bib?

Twenty-five local toddlers between the ages of two and four will recreate this scene Feb. 9 at Northshore Shopping Center from 2 to 3 p.m. as part of a contest to determine which toddler can remain the "Tidiest" while eating a delicious chocolate cone.

The "Tide-y Toddler" contest, sponsored by Procter & Gamble's new Liquid Tide, offers prizes for both the winning toddler and his/her mother. Shoppers and members of the audience also will have a chance to win a drawing for a washer/dryer combination simply by registering at the mall. (Parents can register their children until Sunday, Feb. 3).

Professional Secretaries to meet

To make the required dinner reservations and for additional information, please contact Ms. Phyllis Bernazani at 666-5450, Ext. 111, or 484-0659 (evenings).

Retired Federal Employees to meet February 12

WAKEFIELD — The Albert R. Hodgman Chapter No. 507, National Association of Retired Federal Employees will hold its regular monthly meeting at the Beebe Memorial Library, Main and Avon Sts., on Tuesday, February 12, at 1:30 p.m.

Appropriately, President Frank J. Conley has obtained a guest speaker from the Internal Revenue Service Office, Boston. Assistant Taxpayers Service Specialist, Miss Constance Blanchard, will pertinently discuss how to properly complete the 1985 Income Tax form. At the end of her discourse, she will conduct a question and answer period.

Past President and Legislative Officer, Henry J. Carroll, Wakefield, will give his usual informative and interesting report on the upcoming legislative matters before Congress that may affect our organization and its members.

After the meeting, the collation co-ordinators, Mrs. Selma Hanscomb, Stoneham, and Miss Mildred Sherlock, Melrose, will serve coffee and their home-baked cookies and cakes.

Additional information may be obtained from President Conley, 300 Mt. View Terrace, Stoneham, or telephone him at 438-6509.

'A Soldier's Play' at Collins Center

The Negro Ensemble Company's stunning production of "A Soldier's Play" will be on stage at the J. Everett Collins Center for the Performing Arts in Andover for one performance only, Tuesday, Feb. 26, at 8 p.m. This special presentation of Charles Fuller's Pulitzer Prize-winning drama is part of the Collins Center's celebration of Black History Month.

A Soldier's Play is a remarkable work about hate and prejudice. Using the theatrical form of a courtroom drama, playwright Fuller creates a murder mystery that explodes with tension and excitement. A middle-aged, black Army sergeant is shot to death near Fort Neal, Louisiana, in 1944. The case is investigated by a black legal officer serving under the base's white company.

With wit, sensitivity and intelligence, Fuller examines questions that go far beyond the killing of one man. Staged by Douglas Turner Ward, this production by the Negro Ensemble Company is powerful theatre at its best.

A Soldier's Play, at the J. Everett Collins Center for the Performing Arts Feb. 26 at 8 p.m., is produced in cooperation with Commonwealth Federal Savings Bank and Marshall's Corporation. Tickets, $16.50 and $12.50, are available at the Collins Center Box Office (on the campus of Andover High School), Shawsheen Road, off Rte. 133 and Rte. 93 in Andover; or by phone at (617) 470-1905.

"I Learned More Than I Thought I Would."
ATI FACULTY "Go(es) All Out For The Student."

Recently we got these comments from several recent graduates of ATI's programs:

Chris McHugh (Electronics) writes:
"I enrolled in ATI's Computer Electronics program to learn about electronics and their practical application. I have received a very good understanding of electronics and computer internals."

"In addition, the services offered by ATI are excellent. I learned a lot about job finding, interviewing and reading down concrete leads. I am going to miss ATI and will always give the school a good recommendation."

Gi Panto (Electronics) writes:
"I learned more than I thought I would. (and I wish I could have had more time. Russo (the teacher), has a great way to relate to the students, which helps us to understand better. I love it (ATI Services). They go all out for the students and show you how to have more confidence in yourself."

Finally, Jim Stallings (Refrigeration & Air Conditioning) writes:
"I got a lot out of this course. I feel good about what I learned here and if I had to do it again I would."

ROVING

Take some TIPS on drinking and driving

FM TALK: A lot of activity crossed the path of our gallivanting-around correspondent this week. The following is some of it.

You readers may recall my column of a few weeks ago on the subject of drinking and driving. Well, shortly after it ran I received a phone call from old friend and former manager of Thackeray's Table and Tap, in Woburn, Steve Beigbender. Steve is currently vice president of personnel for the entire Thackeray's chain of fine food restaurants. He called to tell us about a special program his restaurants have recently put into effect. The program is called TIPS, which stands for Training for Intervention Procedures by Servers of Alcohol.

What TIPS boils down to, according to Steve, is an intensive training program for bartenders and waitresses on how to recognize customers who have had enough to drink. Steve got the idea to incorporate this program into his company after attending an alcoholic awareness conference in Boxborough last year. Shortly after the conference another restaurant, Tom Foolery's, began the program with their employees. After seeing the success they were having Steve decided to bring TIPS to Thackeray's.

The program, which is conducted under the guidance of the Health Education Foundation, first had to be given to Steve. Following his intensive training in New Hampshire, Steve was prepared to teach his employees acceptable standards for serving alcohol across the bar and at tables in the restaurants.

"Once they take the course they are certified for one year by the foundation," said Steve.

This is particularly important, he feels, because present laws in this state require that restaurant and bar employees make every reasonable effort possible to control the amount of liquor consumed by patrons. By taking this course, and being certified by the Health Education Foundation, employees and the establishment are protecting themselves in case they are ever taken to court as a result of being accused of over serving a customer who was involved in a serious accident.

According to Steve, who is only the seventy-third restaurant executive in the country to be trained by the foundation to conduct the TIPS program, each of his service attendants is required to take the course. "They can flunk once and take the course again," he noted, adding, "but if they flunk twice, they are removed from a liquor-serving position."

Steve indicated, however, that only two out of eighty-one of his employees who have taken the course so far have flunked it. With fifty percent of his employees having completed the course, he considers the success rate to be very high. One of the main reasons the success rate is high, says Steve, is because the employees are so enthusiastic about the course. According to him, they are happy that they are finally being given some sort of guidelines to follow, now that the state is putting such an emphasis on the server's responsibility in controlling consumers' intake of alcohol.

"The course is expensive," Steve indicated, "but that's the way things go."

Considering the legal expenses a restaurant and its employees can face if they are taken to court these days, the expense of preventing such incidences should be regarded as minimal. Perhaps other restaurants and bars will follow the example being set by Tom Foolery's and the Thackeray's chain, and we'll all be a step closer to, as Sgt. Jim Sartori of the Mass. State Police says, "a reasonable approach to drinking and driving."

Moving on: Another enterprising young fellow from Woburn is Bruce Williams, who recently started a business called the Mystery Bus Ride Company. Bruce explained exactly what the Mystery Bus Ride Company is all about:

"It's just that — a mystery bus ride. Your destination is always unknown."

According to Bruce, who began his ventures in entertainment with cruises out of Boston Harbor last summer, the mystery bus ride begins at the Howard Johnson Motor Lodge, in Burlington.

"It begins with an hour and a half cocktail party," he said. "There's always live entertainment, everything from some of Boston's best-known comedians to quality musicians. I try to choose the type of entertainment that will get the group involved. I want them to enjoy themselves and to participate."

Following the cocktail party everybody boards a motor coach, and they head out for their first destination. "The destinations range from Boston's large night clubs to comedy workshops to restaurants to pubs," Bruce pointed out, stressing that there's always enough time allotted to reach at least three or four destinations in one night.

"Then the bus returns to Howard Johnson's around two-fifteen a.m.," he said. "With all the concern over driving and drinking, this is a super idea for getting out on the town and enjoying yourself without the fear of getting stopped by police or into an accident."

Sounds great to this always-on-the-go correspondent.

Briefly, more FM TALK: What do you think of Ann Landers — Mike Royko Battle of the Polls on what women and men really like when it comes to the physical stuff? Personally, I think the whole thing is pretty funny. Landers' poll claims seventy-two percent of the ninety thousand women she surveyed prefer being cuddled than having sex. Royko's poll of ten thousand men claims sixty-six percent of them would rather have sex than go bowling. I'd like to conduct my own poll. How many of you women would rather stay home and hug your husband's bowling ball than go out to a movie? As for the men, how many of you would rather drink beer and snooze on the couch than take your wife shopping?

Have you heard the latest news from Hollywood? There's a good chance that we might be watching movies like "Casablanca" in color by this summer, thanks to a new computer graphics process called color spectrography. You know what I say to that? Blah! Who wants to watch such a great black and white film as "Casablanca" in color? The picture was made forty-three years ago, and the black and white film adds to the realism and nostalgia of the era. Color is fine for most new films, but I wish Hollywood would leave the old movies alone. Black and white films are meant to be black and white, or else they would have been made in color in the first place.

According to Gentlemen's Quarterly, the Cosmo of the male fashion set, five o'clock shadows are in. Can you believe that? In order to look rugged, which is apparently the "in" look nowadays, men are actually working at having a stubbly growth on their chins all the time. Even some of the male stars are perpetuating the hirsute look, guys like Bruce Springsteen, Harrison Ford, Mel Gibson and Don Johnson. A couple of suggestions made by GQ, if you're in the frame of mind to join in on the new look: Use an electric shaver, or shave with a regular razor before you go to bed. In either case, you'll have the shadowy effect you want by the time you go to work in the morning or hit the town at night. I'll stick to trying to look clean shaven, thank you.

The big news in Paris this week: Mick Jagger walked into a cafe and was recognized by only twenty people! How times have changed. It wasn't too many years ago that Jagger was the most recognized face in the world. Of course, being forty-one has a lot to do with passers-by not readily recognizing the famous rock singer. That and the muffler he usually wears to conceal his lips, which are his most recognizable feature.

"Some men would see the world with the eyes of God. And would grasp the secrets of the hereafter by means of human thought. But go instead into the field, and see how the bee hovers over the sweet flowers and the eagle swoops down on its prey." — Kahlil Gibran.

Make it a good week.

Old Sturbridge Village, located on Route 20 off the Mass. Turnpike in Sturbridge is a living history museum that re-creates a New England town of the 1830s. The museum covers over 200 acres, with more than 40 restored buildings where people in historical dress demonstrate the life, work, and community celebrations of early 19th-century New Englanders.

Stock tracers, a Virginia garden, how to serve the public and George Washington's birthday, that's quite a well-rounded group of happenings for COMING ATTRACTIONS to have come across. But there is always something else equally as important and entertaining that we miss and could use your help in discovering. If you know of an event of interest to all, write, care of this local newspaper and tell us all about it. We will be sure to "trace it down", make it as beautiful as a Southern garden in spring, give it the newness of the first president and serve it to you on a tray. We don't know any other way.

Movie Review

IN HER NEWEST COMEDY role, Goldie Hawn stars as a spirited cocktail waitress in Washington, D.C. who, through a twist of fate is catapulted overnight to national attention in "Protocol."

sweetness and goodness that is generally lacking in today's films. So, as long as you aren't looking for high art, Protocol should satisfy, as it has everything needed for pleasing entertainment: a few good laughs and a happy ending.

"The Flamingo Kid" Starring Matt Dillon, Richard Crenna, Hector Elizondo, Jessica Walter. Directed by Gary Marshall. Produced by Michael Phillips. Screenplay by Marshall and Neal Marshall. Rated PG-13 (profanity).

The Flamingo Kid is one of the few movies about teens that doesn't rely on glandular, nocturnal activities, and is therefore more appealing to the entire family. Set in the early 1960's, the story revolves around Matt Dillon as Jeffrey Willis, a confused kid trying to cope with growing pains.

Jeffrey, in his first real act of independence, finds employment as a parking lot attendant at the El Flamingo Beach Club in Far Rockaway, New York. There, flanked by well-oiled bodies and fancy cars, he is tempted by the idea of a fast buck, as opposed to a college education.

Offering that fast buck is Richard Crenna, as a hustling car salesman/card shark. Crenna, in his neon clothing and never-ending chatter, is delightfully sleazy. Crenna, who began his career on radio while a child, and then switched to television, has taken his many years of experience and turned out a most memorable character.

Director Gary Marshall shot the movie entirely on location, and successfully captured New York in an era when girls wore orange lipstick and guys had flat top hair cuts. While the main action is going on, there is always the pulsating energy of the beach club in the background, where the fun and games are announced over the intercom every hour, and middle aged men can be found learning how to twist from buxom, young women.

The supporting cast, especially Hector Elizondo as Jeffrey's dad, give stylish, energetic performances. On the whole, The Flamingo Kid is sweet, humorous, and a winner.

Coming Attractions

Get a jump on Spring

Homes of different ages and in distinctive sites will be polished to a rich patina to welcome visitors to Historic Garden Week in Virginia April 20 through April 28.

Flowering trees and colorful wild flowers edge the roadsides leading to the more than 200 homes and gardens in 32 areas of the state. Special events are planned in many localities to add to the festivities and church and community groups offer home cooked lunches for the convenience of the visitors.

Such towns and cities as Portsmouth, Charlottesville, Augusta, Alexandria, Chatham, Danville, Virginia's Eastern Shore, Fredericksburg, Ashland, Harrisonburg, Lexington, Lynchburg, Martinsville, Petersburg, Colonial Williamsburg, Warrenton, and Winchester will be some of the sites where the homes and gardens will be open to the public.

The generous owners who open their homes and gardens and the gracious charm of the garden week hostesses combine to reawaken the Southern hospitality. The members of the Historic Garden Week Headquarters will assist visitors in planning their visit to Virginia by contacting them by telephone, (804) 644-7776, or by writing to the headquarters at 12 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Virginia, 23219.

Detailed information on the homes, gardens and historical landmarks is covered in a guidebook, published by the Historic Garden Week Committee and is available, free of charge, at the Historic Garden Week headquarters. If requested by mail, the headquarters would appreciate a remittance of $1 toward the cost of postage.

Washington's Birthday

Early 19th-century New Englanders flushed with patriotism as they put on their best dress, held special Meetinghouse services, and made heroic toasts in celebration of George Washington's birthday. This holiday spirit and flurry of activity will be re-created at Old Sturbridge Village, Sturbridge, Mass. on the 3-day weekend of Feb. 16 through 18.

On Feb. 16, costumed interpreters at Towne House, Old Sturbridge Village, will be busy preparing for the evening ball that would have taken place in the 1830s. Visitors will see interpreters sprucing up their finest clothes and styling their hair in 1830s fashions. In the kitchen interpreters will be creating festive foods including stuffed dates, french tarts, Carmel of Spun Sugar and Syllabub (an early 19th-century punch of brandy, milk, and wine) for the special occasion.

In addition, a special ladies tea will be held at 3:15 PM in Fitch House. Visitors may observe this 1830s tradition and hear a discussion of the latest local news.

Traditional toasts to the nation's first president will be made by costumed interpreters at Bullard Tavern, Feb. 17 and 18 at 3:15 PM. Visitors are invited to join in this patriotic cheer.

For more information on Washington's Birthday festivities at Old Sturbridge Village, call 347-3362.
